Cheap Sugar. How Long?
Mother's Milk $1 an Ounce
Two Studying Ghosts
The Dance Demon
—By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1920.

Scientific gentlemen announce a process for making pure white sugar from corn, at four cents a pound. That ought to be very good for a few weeks. After that the group of sugar profiteers that have been robbing the country since the war started will own the new process. And if the present administration remains at Washington it will do nothing serious to interfere with putting the price of the new four-cent sugar up to twenty cents.

If you want cheap sugar get rid of the kind of government that has given you the dear sugar. This is not a guaranty, by any means, that a Republican administration would do any better, but it MIGHT, and you know that the Democratic administration WON'T.

Many babies too young to talk would be interested in this news, if they could be interested in anything:

"If the starving Sinn Feiners now in England prisons should be released the only way to keep them alive would be to feed them at first on mother's milk only, like new-born infants."

Many infants, for lack of mother's milk, are extremely thin, and many others for the same reason are in the graveyard. Mother's milk gets scarcer and scarcer as "civilization and prosperity" increase.

There is a regular agency in New York city selling mother's milk, guaranteed fresh, at $1 or more per ounce.

In England mother's milk is cheaper, more plentiful than in the United States. But if the milk cost a million dollars a quart it would pay the English government to buy a supply of it and begin now feeding it to her political prisoners dying of starvation, letting them die of starvation for "political reasons" is a dangerous game even for a very powerful empire. It may be more expensive than mother's milk for Sinn Feiners.

Here and there you find efficiency even in after-the-war "let-down."

In Detroit the learned judges have been granting divorces at the rate of one every ninety-six seconds. An old lady in the court watching the mill grinding contributed this enlightening statement:

"Not one of those husbands and wives would ask for divorce if they knew how interesting every man and woman really is. There is nothing in life after all but studying interesting things. A man or a woman married has a lifelong chance to study the most interesting thing in the world, which is a human being, saying exactly what it thinks and feels. Divorce is all foolishness if men and women only knew it."

Men and women are ghosts, clad for a moment in solid flesh, dwelling far apart. Each should welcome the chance to study some other ghost at close range, even a dull or slightly unfaithful ghost. The unfaithful ghost, queer creature, is especially worth while.

William Robbins, a young farmer in Iowa, and his wife lost their baby, Vivian Constance, about one year old. It was buried, Mr. and Mrs. Robbins believed—in Spiritualism, and prayed constantly that the baby might be returned. One night, they say, they heard a voice say that their baby was coming back. There was a bright light in the room and there was the baby in the bed. Whether it had changed and had grown one year older, is not stated. But they recognized it by a mark on its leg. All this is bewildering and beyond our comprehension. It teaches us little.

But now comes a photograph of Mr. Robbins holding his baby right. He has been told by a medium that the baby may die September 14, which is today. This can be avoided only "by strict obedience to all spirit control," says the medium. Watch tomorrow's papers.

Meanwhile you do learn something here, namely, that it doesn't take long for the managers of a new religion or a spiritual theory to arrange matters so that their orders must be strictly obeyed.

Without this, religion would not be profitable and it could not endure.

The Rev. Dr. Straton, enemy of "mixed dancing," takes virtue seriously, as clergymen should. With photographs to illustrate his strictures, he says, pointing to a young man and woman dancing close together, "No human being could maintain philosophic calm in the circumstances of the dance pictured here."

That is true. But, Dr. Straton, the dance was invented to relieve human beings of the dreadful monotony of philosophical calm. People want to forget philosophy. They want to forget the calm that is stagnation of the nerves. They want to give their brains a rest and their bodies exercise, so they dance.

Dr. Straton says that if he succeeds in carrying out his plans and can banish dancing to "the depths of hell," he himself will dance a religious dance of joy. There you are, doctor. Even you want to dance, sometimes.

Refiners Fight to Keep Sugar Prices Up

HUB WOMAN LEAPS INTO LAKE

BOSTON TO HAVE IRISH CONSULATE

COLLAPSE IN SUGAR MARKET

Wholesalers Desperately Try to Hold Prices Up; Jobbers, Frantically Unload

An inquiry into the Boston sugar situation today revealed the following outstanding facts, of considerable interest to Mr. Ultimate Consumer:

1—The bottom has fallen out of the wholesale sugar market. Jobbers who bought at 20 cents are frantically unloading at 15.

2—The refiners are desperately trying to keep the price up by artificial means, such as refusing to sell at the prevailing rate. They are advising jobbers to hang on, as the long chance of a rise in price. The rise may not come, but they hope for the worst.

3—Boston retailers are running true to form. Buying for 15 cents, they are not selling for 17 or 18 cents, which would mean a fair profit, but at 18 and 20 cents.

Jobbers were selling as low as 14.5 cents today sugar which cost them over twenty cents some months ago. And they were hunting orders at that price. The far-seeing ones declared prices would go lower yet.

Jobbers "stuck" with large quantities of twenty and 22½-cent sugar were standing by the refiners, who are trying to keep the market up.

Jobbers who have no sugar on hand were bitterly denouncing the refiners. One such dealer declared that both the American and Revere Sugar Refineries were scolding each in the hope that the price would rise.

He characterized the recent well-advertised cut from 22½ cents to 17½ cents by the Revere company as "camouflage."

"They know they can't sell at that price with four big New York refineries selling below 15 cents," he charged. "They don't want to sell."

As for the American company, it has apparently dropped out of the market. It is not seeking new contracts at the lower prices. The last prices quoted were 22½ cents. Elsewhere prices may fall. But 22½ cents is the American Sugar Refining Company's story, and the company purposes to stick to it.

Tomorrow's the Day; Take 'Em Off

Bells ring tomorrow for straw hats.

Fifteenth day of September is the day fixed upon by the Grand Solemn Muskrat of the Order of Sapheads for tossing the faithful straw into the garage can and sentencing the beau to nine months semi-confinement in a split or 270 days at hard labor in a derby.

The day is religiously observed everywhere by people born under the sign of Aries on the First Day of April.

Hezekiah Dyer of Sauquoi Centre suggests that $1,927,514.92 could be paid on the national debt if the men of the United States would cover their straw hats with oyerall cloth on September 14 and make them "do" for the Winter. Ear laps of chicken wings are effective. The extremely cold days the re-flavored straw could be heated by small lamps.

Only man in New England faithful to the straw hat throughout the year is Waldhurst Findel, of the Gobiemouche House at Gloucester. The "Wal" clerks in North Shore hotels in the Summer and in Florida houses in the Winter. Bought his present outfit of glad rags just before the Kaiser went binney in 1914.

Weak spot in the Constitution, if there is one, is its failure to provide that male citizens may cover their roofs as they please.

If there is anything in this equal suffrage business, the "hes" should have the right to wear straw hats at Christmas just as long as the "shes" enjoy furs in Summer.

If male Americans had had the strength to stand up against the September 15th Bell Ringers, we never should have had prohibition.

However, tomorrow's the day, and if you want peace in the family, "take 'em off."

8 NEW CHILD PLAGUE CASES

Largest Number for One Day This Year; One Victim Dies

Eight new cases, the largest in any one day since the outbreak of infantile paralysis in Boston on July 24, were reported to the local health Department today. One death was also recorded in the past twenty four hours. Six of the cases were of non-residents brought to Boston hospitals for treatment.

No diminution in the number of cases is expected until the middle of October, according to an official statement from the health department, on account of the season of the year at which the outbreak occurred.

"Experience shows that when infantile paralysis is present at this season of the year, the number of cases reported cannot be expected to diminish before the middle of October," it states.

Mc'SWINEY IN GREAT PAIN

Passes Another Bad Night; Mind Active; Determined Not to Yield

BULLETIN

London, Sept. 14.—Terence MacSwiney passed a bad night in the Brixton jail infirmary, but his mind was active. He was restless and suffered considerable pain, but still determined not to give in.

London, Sept. 14.—Terence MacSwiney, the hunger-striking Lord Mayor of Cork, was alive and retained unimpaired mental faculties early today as he started his thirty-third day without food.

He was so weak, however, that his wife, who was at his side, did not speak to him. She feared the exertion he would be put to in listening or an attempt of his to talk to her might prove fatal.

Cork, Ireland, Sept. 14.—Evidence directed to gain a clue that Joseph Murphy and Sean Hennessy, two of the dying hunger-strikers, are innocent, was laid before General Willis in the Cork military barracks by Harold Barry, former high sheriff of the county General Willis immediately made a report to Dublin Castle, the seat of British government in Ireland.

REPUBLIC OFFICIAL COMING

Independent Ireland to Send Consuls to Number of American Cities

An Irish consulate with a permanent representative of the republican government of Ireland will be established in Boston early in October, J. L. Fawsitt, Irish consul-general in the United States, now on a visit to this city, announced today.

The Irish consul will be one of several Irishmen now on the way to this country for diplomatic work, the selection for this post not having been made. Other consulates will be established during the Fall in New Orleans, Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco. The New York district is taken care of from the offices of Consul-General Fawsitt at No. 113 Nassau street, New York city.

A direct ship line between Boston and Irish ports also is in prospect.

"I am confident that such a service will be in operation before January, 1921," the consul-general said.

The creation of new consulates has been made necessary, Mr. Fawsitt said, by the increase in business since the New York office was established one year ago.

"As evidence of the growth of trade between Ireland and America," he said, "the exports from Ireland to the United States through New York in July, 1919, represented a value of $1,160,000. In the same month this year they were $3,311,000.

"In July of last year the exports to Ireland amounted only to $50,841, but in the same month this year they aggregated $1,500,000. All these goods were carried on American boats."

Maine's Vote Dooms Wilson League

Politicians of both the old parties declared today that yesterday's election of a Republican Governor of Maine by the largest plurality in the State's history probably has sealed the doom of President Wilson's League of Nations. The league was the one big issue.

Frederick H. Parkhurst of Bangor, Republican, despite eleventh hour attacks on the subject of wartime contracts, was elected over Bertrand G. McIntire of Norway by a plurality variously estimated from 50,000 to 70,000.

Senator Lodge, Governor Coolidge, Theodore Roosevelt, Josephus Daniels, Franklin D. Roosevelt and W. Bourke Cochran were among those taking part in the contest.

"The important thing about these figures," said one of the most prominent Republican leaders in the East, "is that they give us our first certain line on the position of American wives and mothers towards an international pact under which their sons and husbands might be torn from them to do 'police' work in the far corners of the earth.

"The women, as the Hearst newspapers apparently anticipated, are strong for following George Washington's advice and having nothing to do with European politics. We had a hint of their position in the result of the Moses-Spaulding contest in New Hampshire. The Maine verdict confirms it. The women of the United States are against the Wilson League. And the women will decide this election."

The latest returns from 474 out of 519 cities and towns gives Colonel Parkhurst 135,885, and McIntire 69,424.

DESTROYS MARRIAGE LICENSE

Boston Woman Who Tries to Die Tears Up Evidence of Her Identity

New York, Sept. 14.—After tearing up a license issued in Boston in 1891, certifying to the marriage of "Isabelle Proctor Miller and Alfred Lincoln Fowle," a woman about fifty years of age, fashionably dressed, today jumped into the lake just off Fifty-ninth street and Sixth avenue.

A patrolman jumped into the water after her and got her out. She was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where, according to the police, she refused to tell why she had attempted to take her life, or to give her name or address.

The torn pieces of the marriage license found on the shores of the lake were pasted together, and thus far furnish the only possible clew to the woman's identity, with another paper from "The Probate Court of Middlesex," also found torn into bits near the lake.

This latter paper, apparently issued prior to the marriage certificate tells of the application made by "Frances Isabella Miller" for permission to change her name to "Isabella Proctor Miller," on the granting of such permission by the Probate Court.

The date of the issuance of the paper was on a scrap blown out of sight by the wind, as was part of the paper bearing the name of the registrar who issued it. All that could be made of the latter name was "George M. Ba—."

At Bellevue Hospital it was said that the woman would recover.

COTTON MEN BREAK LOBBY LAW IN WARNER-HATHAWAY CASE

Manufacturers Fail to Report Amount Paid to Legislative Agent, "Partner" of Speaker

That the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers Association, the organization which was represented at the State House by Attorney Harold P. Hathaway of Taunton, involved in the Peter Warner charges, failed to file a return as required by law of the amount paid Hathaway for his services, was announced by the Secretary of State's Department.

The Secretary of State has communicated the alleged violation of the law to Attorney-General Allen along with some 200 other alleged infringements of the Corrupt Practices Act.

HATHAWAY ON RECORD.

Congressman Fuller is alleged to have charged in his campaign for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor that Speaker Warner split the fees collected by Hathaway for appearing before committees of the Legislature appointed by Warner.

Warner replied that he has no law partner and that the only time Hathaway, who shares law offices with him, appeared before a committee the bill advocated by him was rejected.

Hathaway recorded himself with the sergeant-at-arms under the lobby law as legislative counsel for the Fall River Manufacturers' Association. He advocated for the manufacturers, a bill to postpone until next year the continuation school law, which provides that children employed in industry shall devote a certain number of hours each week to school attendance and education.

The lobby laws provide:

"Within thirty days after the prorogation of the General Court every person, corporation or association whose name appears upon the dockets so closed, as employers of any legislative counsel or agent, shall render to the Secretary of the Commonwealth a complete and detailed statement, under oath, of all expenses incurred or paid in connection with the employment of counsel or legislative agents or with promoting or opposing legislation."

Attorney-General Allen has been advised by the Secretary of State's Department that the association has failed to file that return.

OFFICER SHOOTS SOUTH END MAN

John Cassidy, twenty-eight years old, of West Newton street, was shot by Patrolman John L. Hunt of the East Dedham street station during a struggle between the policeman and two civilians today.

Cassidy was taken to the City Hospital where he was found to be wounded in the left leg, while the policeman was treated for a kick in the groin.

According to the police, Hunt, in civilian clothing, was on his way home when he heard three men creating a disturbance at the corner of Tremont and West Newton streets.

Crossing the street toward them, Hunt said they broke and ran, one proceeding down Tremont street while the other two entered an alley off West Newton street.

Hunt followed the two men into the alley and was set upon, receiving rough treatment. He eventually drew his revolver and fired, whereupon Cassidy dropped. The other man, who ran away, was identified as Edward McGair of Springfield street by the policeman. No charge was lodged against Cassidy.

MAINE'S VOTE DOOMS LEAGUE

Landslide for Republican Ticket Aided by 75,000 Women

Congress were elected by large majorities.

Carroll L. Beedy of Portland, present Cumberland County Attorney, carried the Republicans to victory in the first district. Wallace H. White, Jr., of Lewiston, in the second district, John A. Peters of Ellsworth, in the third district and Ira G. Hersey of Houlton, in the fourth district, were re-elected.

BLOW TO LEAGUE.

Women voted in Maine for the first time, and in spite of the heavy downpour of rain it is believed that fully 75,000 went to the polls. Of this number it is estimated that at least 80 per cent of the women voted the Republican ticket.

The Republican landslide has dismayed Maine Democratic leaders, particularly because of the blow it has dealt the League of Nations. Thousands of voters of Irish birth or descent cast a Republican ballot for the first time in their lives as a result of the Democratic support of the league. A particularly heavy G. O. P. vote was cast in the cities, and in fact the entire vote was the largest in the history of the State.

Knox county, which has been Democratic for twenty-five years, went Republican by fully 600 votes. Rockland, the seat of this county, which has been a democratic stronghold for five years, was turned over to the Republicans.

WIN ALL IN STATE SENATE.

The Republicans have won every seat in the State Senate. Out of a membership of 151 in the House of Representatives the Democrats returned but eleven men to the lower body. The Senate has a membership of thirty-one.

One of the surprises of the election was the tremendous majority given Colonel Parkhurst. It is significant to compare the present election, coming as it does in a presidential year, with that for the office of Governor in 1916:

Carl E. Milliken, Republican, received 87,746 votes, and his opponent, Curtis, Democrat, polled, 67,830.

The nearest approach to the majority given Colonel Parkhurst was in 1896 when approximately 57,000 votes were polled by Llewlyn Powers, Republican. Melvin P. Frank, Democrat, was given 34,355.

Of the eleven Democratic members elected to the State House of Representatives five come from Lewiston, three from Biddeford, two from Waterville, and one from Knox county.

Lewiston, Biddeford and Waterville were faithful to the Democrats and McIntire won in these cities by small majorities. In Augusta the Republicans gained nearly 1,000 votes over their total of four years ago. In Brewer the G. O. P. ticket gained 500 votes and in Calais won by a plurality of more than 6,000. In 1916 this city gave the Republicans but fourteen votes.

Roy L. Wardwell, Republican, was elected State Auditor by a large majority over his Democratic opponent, James J. Nelson.

More than 7,000 delinquents were found by revenue inspectors the past three months, and word was sent them by Collector Mitchell to pay up at once.

CHARGE FRAUD IN PRIMARY FIGHT

Claim Brimblecom Lost Nomination by Defamatory Letter Sent Out by H. W. Jarvis

Thomas P. Green, a Newton Highlands barber, testified at an inquiry in the Newton Police Court before Attorney Charles F. Bowley, representing Attorney-General Allen, that he was tricked into signing a circular letter defamatory to the character of Representative John C. Brimblecom by former Representative Henry W. Jarvis.

The letter, which was sent to hundreds of voters in Newton before the primaries and is believed responsible for the defeat of Brimblecom, carried Green's signature. He declared that he was not aware what he was signing and stated that he had no knowledge that the letter was to be sent out over his name.

The hearing was demanded by Representative Brimblecom, who charges that the corrupt practice law has been violated inasmuch as only one person contributed to the expense of sending out the circular.

The hearing was adjourned until tomorrow, at which time former Representative Jarvis will be examined.

Brimblecom and in whose interest the letter was sent out, testified that he knew nothing about the letter and repudiated its contents.

Green stated that he signed "some kind of a statement" one day in his barber shop after it had been read to him by Jarvis. He was shaving a man at the time, he said, and did not pay particular attention to its contents.

The inquiry has caused considerable stir among political circles in Newton. The court room was crowded by city officials and politicians attracted by the novel case.

PATRIOT DAMES REJECT LEAGUE

Denounce Newton Minister for Reference to "White Livered Skunks"

Women voters at the monthly meeting of the Patriot Dames voted not to accept the League of Nations and objected to being called "white livered skunks" by the Rev. Dr. George E. Horr of the Newton Theological Institute.

Dr. Horr, in speaking before the Baptist ministers in Kingsley Hall, designated all those who did not accept the League of Nations as "white livered skunks."

Agnes Halfard condemned the words of the minister in severe terms, as well as Mrs. S. E. Stevens, who is running as representative from the twenty-first district, Malden.

Mrs. Halfard said: "The men are beginning to call the women names because they will not vote as they wish. This incident of Dr. Horr terming those who oppose the League of Nations as "white-livered skunks" strikes me as language run wild in a human being. I could not believe that this clergyman could use such language, until I had it verified.

"We will not accept the League of Nations. Women have the right to express themselves freely upon this matter and, we hope, reasonably."

Mrs. Stevens also condemned the language of the minister, and referred to it as a "clerical bombshell of blue Monday, signifying nothing."

"I shall always oppose the League of Nations, and I am as good a Christian to my action in doing so as Dr. Horr," she said.

BOSTON ARMY GIRLS IN FIRST "LUNCH-FROM-YOUR-HOME" CLUB

OPEN WAR ON HIGH PRICES

Members Pledged to Shun Restaurants Until Latter Lower Rates

The first Bring-Your-Lunch-From-Home club has been formed.

It was organized at the offices of the Department of the Northeast, and already has a membership of ten girls, all of whom have pledged themselves to carry their lunches.

Mrs. Edythe Grady, secretary of Chief of Staff Colonel Henry S. Kanred, is the head of the lunch carriers. Miss Irene A. Dee, Julia M. McSweeney and Margaret M. O'Sullivan are chief propagandists. These girls joined the increasing army of home-lunches Monday last. Before the end of the week they hope to have everyone employed in the department offices following suit.

GIRLS TAKE PLEDGE.

Mrs. Grady declares that she will not go back to the restaurant lunch until the present prices are cut in half.

"I enjoyed my lunch today better than I have enjoyed any meal for a long time," she said. "I expect it for more than one reason. First, the food was much better quality than we can get in any of the restaurants near the office; second, I felt that I was saving money, and third, I realized that I was doing my bit to bring the food profiteer to his senses."

Here is the Department of the Northeast pledge that Mrs. Grady and her associates have taken:

"I promise to bring my lunch from home and promise not to patronize any restaurant at noon until the prices are materially reduced."

WHO'S NEXT ORGANIZER?

Gimme, isn't it? Yes, if enough workers in Boston took that pledge and kept it only a week prices would tumble even faster than the food pirates put them up.

Now who will be the next man or woman to organize a "Bring-Your-Lunch-From-Home Club in their office or shop? The fight can be won in a very short time if all who believe they are being robbed by the restaurant keepers will join in the movement. All one needs is courage to join the lunch carrying crusade.

Boston restaurant prices are the highest in the country. Isn't that proof enough that the restaurant patrons are getting a raw deal, and isn't it proof that it is about time for a Boston Tea Party?

HAVE YOU THE COURAGE?

To volunteer for the new "Tea Party" all you need is a little courage and a lunch box. Have you the courage. If you have, join up!

The Boston American intends to give publicity to the "Bring-Your-Lunch-From-Home" movement. Let us know our sentiments on the matter and tell us your experiences after you have tried the idea.

SHIP RATES CUT TO HURT U. S.

English, Warring on American Maritime Competition, Make Heavy Reductions

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Drastic cutting of rates by English shipping firms to offset the development of the American merchant marine was reported to the Shipping Board today.

The opening of new American lines in competition to the British lines under British registry has been the sign for drastic rate cutting by the British ship owners, according to the report which is in the hands of Admiral Benson, chairman of the Shipping Board.

Officials will call into operation all the provisions of the Jones merchant marine act in order to insure fair competition for ships of American registry.

Reports made to Admiral Benson by Charles F. Deutsche, who has recently returned from Europe, indicate that there is strong resentment among European ship owners over efforts to increase the maritime industry in the United States.

HARDING WOULD RESTRICT JAPS

Pledges Aid to California to Bar Out "Unassimilable Aliens"

Marion, Ohio, Sept. 14.—Recognizing there exists between the United States and Japan a friction over the immigration question that might lead to grave consequences, Senator Warren G. Harding promised a group of Californians today the Federal government would stand behind the Pacific Coast state in every measure consistent with national honor to help them solve their problem.

"No one," said Senator Harding, "can tranquilly contemplate the future of this republic without an anxiety for abundant provision for admission to our shore of only the immigrant who can be assimilated and thoroughly imbued with the American spirit.

"There is abundant evidence of the dangers which lurk in racial differences," he said. "These differences, without raising any question of inferiority, superiority or inequality, may create, as I believe they have created in our Pacific Coast States, without blame on either side, a friction that must be recognized.

"The nation owes it to the Pacific Coast States to stand behind them in any necessary measures consistent with our national honor to relieve them of their difficulties."

REVERE FIGHTS FARE BOOST

Mayor and Citizens Will Carry Protest to Governor, Legislature and Courts

A mighty protest against increased fares on the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway is being raised by the citizens of Revere. Headed by Mayor Walsworth, they plan to take their case before Governor Coolidge, the public utilities commission and the legislature.

A fare limit will be put into effect today on the Chelsea-Revere line and the Revere made a 5-cent zone. This makes the new fare from Revere to Boston fifteen cents and is termed by Mayor Walsworth as "outrageous and without justification."

The Mayor declared today that the city government of Revere is prepared for a vigorous struggle to have the matter adjusted. "We will go to Governor Coolidge and ask that he compel the trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts to listen to reason.

"I understand the Boston Elevated Railway is desirous of extending its lines to Revere and give our citizens a 10-cent fare to the city. I am heartily in favor of this.

"If we could, by uniting the East Boston tunnel at full capacity, eliminate the three-cent exchange we have now to cross and give Revere some service. The service on the Eastern Massachusetts has been abominable.

"It will give us one street railway system. That of the Eastern Massachusetts is losing money on the Revere branch. All the more reason why they should be glad to withdraw.

"The change can be made immediately, as legislation is on hand that will permit it. The time has come for Revere to assert her rights. A 15-cent fare to Boston is ridiculous, and then it only would carry us to the city. If our citizens want to go anywhere on Boston, they would have to put up another 10 cents."

The Revere protest will be launched at a hearing tomorrow morning before the Public Utilities Commission. But Mayor Walsworth said that they would not stop there. If need be they will carry their case to the courts.

Officers of the Eastern Massachusetts in Lynn also declared today that the entire campaign would include a sweeping cut in the number of employes and a new run in Lynn. Only one man cars with trailers will release one motorman and two conductors on each run and the number of trips will also be reduced.

Branch offices will be closed and clerks discharged, while every practical means of economizing will be adopted.

CALLS OFF SALE OF HUSBAND

Rockland Wife Refuses $37,000 Bid From Wealthy Woman for Russell

Rockland, Sept. 14.—Mrs. Lillian Russell has called off the sale of her husband. Carl Russell, though "bids" are now being received. An offer of $37,000 from a wealthy woman in Massachusetts has been refused.

The offer, given through a special messenger, were very attractive," said Russell today. "But my wife and I have had a change of heart and decided to try and feed our seven children and ourselves living together."

One by one the fixtures of their little home are being sold to buy food and pay the landlord. Russell said today that he had hunted "everywhere" for work to meet immediate needs. He said that his aim was to capitalize the nation-wide publicity that he had received by going into business.

A letter from a Western business man was the deciding factor, according to Russell. This man offered to finance, with others, enough money to start Russell in business. That is what Russell now wants to do.

"It has not been altogether lovely, the way our proposition was received," he said. "We received letters from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. Some were in favor and others were opposed in their condemnation.

"Among the batch was one from a Western business man who offered to loan upon the bad features of my selling myself to buy food and shelter for my family. I set out to find such a man when the messenger from a wealthy Massachusetts woman, who is unmarried, came to us we told him the sale was off."

"I would like to go into business and capitalize the publicity I received, but must have some work to meet immediate needs."

STRAUS WARNS BRITAIN AGAINST MILK TRUST

London, Sept. 14.—The proposal to form a super-trust for the control of fresh Britain's milk supply has led Nathan Straus of New York to warn the country against the dangers of eliminating competition in that commodity.

Girls in Male Garb Go From Auto Into Mud

When two young women d escribing themselves as Anna Fallon and Louise Norcross and claiming to reside in Boston were shown to the door of the Quincy Police Station by a probation officer and warned not to let it happen again, the Quincy police were ready to close the book and try to forget the busiest night the School Street Station has known since the days of the first Adams.

Thrown from an automobile at midnight into the mud flats of Hough's Neck, and dressed in little more than shirt and trousers, Aunt and Louise on their arrival at the station in an ambulance looked as if they had been working all day cleaning sewers.

Two policemen were detailed to wash the few garments worn by the young women. The wife of a policeman living nearby was called in to act as matron. Other policemen furnished substitute garments of a sort—and early today the "clothes" of the girls were hanging on a line in the station house yard.

Following a whist party in the Hough's Neck section last night, two well-known women of Rock Island were homeward bound in that resort when as they approached Allerton road and Rockland street they saw "intoxication" was written against their names.

Despite the urging of patrolmen and the pleading of probation officer neither young woman would give the names of their male companions of the midnight ride.

The Rock Island women ran to the home of Patrolman Henry W. Thomas of Quincy, who lives in the neighborhood, and Thorne went out with them to investigate. Five minutes later he sent in a call for the ambulance.

Rockland street is the main highway to Rock Island and is flanked on either side by mud flats. When the young women were picked up the side was covered with ooze. Thorne who was Anna Fallon, twenty-three, of Centre street, West Roxbury, and the other claimed to be Louise Norcross, twenty-two, of Tremont street, Boston.

According to the police the garments of one consisted of a man's trousers, a chemise and little else. On the police blotter the word "intoxication" was written against their names.

Despite the urging of patrolmen and the pleading of probation officer neither young woman would give the names of their male companions of the midnight ride.

YOUNG WIFE IS BEING SOUGHT

Henry S. Flint, Her Husband, Fears Woman Is Ill in Some Private House

Somewhere in Greater Boston, possibly delirious and unable to make known her identity, is believed to be Mrs. Asenath Laura Flint, nineteen years old, mother of a fourteen months-old baby.

The woman has been missing from her home at No. 11 Princeton street, East Boston, since she left a note for her heart-broken husband, Henry S. Flint, an employe of the United Drug Company, appealing for assistance in locating her.

The police have been notified and the various hospitals have been searched without success. Mr. Flint now believes that his wife became ill and was taken into some private house.

On a previous occasion in Philadelphia Mrs. Flint was stricken on the street and laid in a hospital in a delirious condition for weeks before her husband found her.

On Friday morning, according to Mr. Flint, his wife left home with the avowed intention of collecting money on a day's work which she had performed in a Boston restaurant. Mrs. Flint was unable to recall the name of the restaurant. Her husband believed it was in the vicinity of Washington and Eliot streets. Her husband advised her to remain at home, as she appeared to be ill. She left, however, with a parting word.

Mrs. Flint is described as 5 feet 6 inches tall, with dark eyes and dark hair, having a scar on the right cheek. She wore a black satin dress with gold braid trimming, a black turban hat with silver trimming, black shoes and stockings and carried an umbrella and handbag.

2 AUTO BANDITS CAUGHT IN RACE

Negro Highwaymen Are Taken in Springfield After a Holdup in Palmer

By International News Service.

Springfield, Sept. 14.—After staging three holdups in this city and Palmer in twenty-four hours, two negro highwaymen were caught at Winchester square here today, following a three-mile automobile chase.

The bandits were on their way back from a holdup in Palmer in a machine which they had stolen in this city last night.

The officers, noticing the car going at high speed, gave chase. The police caught up with the bandits and both machines were going so fast that they collided.

The officers drew their guns and ordered the colored men from their machine.

SUNFLOWER GROWS OUT OF A BIG MAPLE TREE

Middletown, N. Y., Sept. 14.—At the home of Mary O'Dewitt here a big sunflower is growing out of the trunk of a large maple tree. The stem is about three feet in length and the flower is as large as a saucer. The seed is believed to have been dropped by a bird.

RICH WOMAN IN HUMBLE ATTIC

Lawrence Police Probe Mystery of Mrs. Beaulieu Revealed by Fire

Lawrence, Sept. 14.—Police today are seeking to unravel the secret of this city's "mystery woman"—Mrs. Feud Beaulieu, who has been living here for the past two weeks in comparative poverty while she had personal securities of more than $40,000 hidden in the trunk of a Broadway lodging-house attic room she accidentally set on fire.

Mrs. Beaulieu is now in the Municipal Hospital under treatment. Morphine and other drugs were found in her room on Broadway the day the police. Physicians believe she was dazed when in lighting a gas jet the wall paper caught fire.

FIND BANK BOOKS.

Other lodgers, smelling the smoke, forced an entrance, and say she was lying in bed. Lt. Daniel F. Cry ordered her removal to the hospital. He is said to have discovered the drugs in her bag.

Search of her room for drugs revealed the package of bank books, by which Mrs. Beaulieu at first refused to surrender. Among the reported findings was a book of a Lowell bank showing a deposit of $20,000 last July, books of two other Lowell banks and a book of a Montreal bank. Checks for sums ranging from $50 to $1400 were also found. If these securities can be found to be genuine the police anticipate little difficulty in tracing back the past of the "mystery woman." By some it was believed that she comes from a wealthy Montreal family from which she has been living apart.

ONCE LIVED IN SALEM.

The woman lodginghouse keeper declares that she knew Mrs. Beaulieu years ago in Salem, but did not recognize her when she applied for lodging two weeks ago, so greatly had the "mystery woman" changed in appearance. The keeper recalled that her lodger's husband was killed while working for Salem contractors. Compensation checks found in the trunk seem to corroborate her recollection.

While in the lodginghouse Mrs. Beaulieu lived in seclusion. She dressed herself in rags in such a way as to be disfigured, and kept her face hidden. A lodger tells of lending her $1 for medicine.

WHITESIDE IN ROMANTIC PLAY AT HOLLIS

By FRED J. McISAAC.

Walker Whiteside, an actor who rarely visits Boston, began an engagement at the Hollis last night in a romantic play by Carl Mason, based upon R. L. Stevenson's "Master of Ballantrae."

It was a real old fashioned "romantic drama" with a voice concealed in a suit of armor to speak a prologue and epilogue, a lot of characters wearing the kilts and a swordfight by candle light in the last act.

Whiteside is a romantic actor of the school of twenty years ago, a dashing swashbuckler, a fascinating villain with a deep voice and rather grandiloquent delivery. Play and star were admirably suited to each other.

It has been many years since I read "The Master of Ballantrae," and I remember it indistinctly, but it seemed to me that Carl Mason had made the leading figure more of an out and out rascal than Stevenson created him. The Master, as Whiteside played him, is about as magnificent a rogue as ever out a throat.

In the play he comes to a richly deserved end after his rascality has been properly exposed by feigning death, with the aid of a Hindoo servant and an East Indian trick, and failing to come back to life, as the trick provided. I believe the idea is to swallow your tongue, which throws you into a trance. Try it in your home.

The best thing in the piece is a love scene in the second act, in which Ballantrae, with a golden tongue, fascinates his brother's wife into an agreement to elope with him. This was admirably worked up by Mr. Whiteside and Miss Sydney Shields.

W. Mayne Lynton did a good job with the rather ungrateful part of the good and noble brother who constrasts unfavorably during most of the play with the wicked but fascinating brother Ballantrae.

Alexander Frank was effective as a faithful old steward, and Kanhi Yose was amusing for a moment as a Scottish lad whose brogue was unimpeachable. Maurice Barrett, as a Hindoo follower of Ballantrae, got a lot of well-deserved applause for his demonstration of the tongue swallowing trick as well as his acting of the role.

Basil West as the aged Lord Durie did not look so much like a lord as he did like the late Queen Victoria.

Lots of the actors wore the kilts, for Ballantrae Castle is in Scotland, but there were no bagpipes.

Careless Shampooing Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully. If you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonsful of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

Other Theatres

PARK THEATRE—The change of policy at the Park Theatre, which took place last night, appeared to meet the approval of the picture loving public, as was demonstrated by the large and enthusiastic audience which packed this popular play house. "The Devil's Pass Key" is a very strong, interesting drama, filled with spectacular scenes and carrying a comprehensive dramatic story from beginning to end. This was followed by "La La Lucille," screened from the musical play of the same title, which appeared at the Colonial Theatre last season and which is even a better screen play than the stage version.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA—The long awaited and much heralded Anneta Kellerman production, "What Women Love," a First National attraction, made its appearance at Gordon's Olympia where it will remain for a week's run. This is the famed diving Venus's first modern story and is entirely different from anything she has ever done.

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH—Constance Talmadge in "The Perfect Woman" was seen last evening at Gordon's Old South Theatre. It is the story of Mary Blake, who vamps her way into the home of Jimmy Stanhope, multi-millionaire, and supposed woman hater.

GORDON'S CHELSEA—No play has given the public a more decided insight into life as it is lived in the great northwoods than "The River's End," the first of Marshall Nelan's independent productions, taken from the story by James Oliver Curwood, which was seen last evening at Gordon's Chelsea Olympia Theatre.

SCOLLAY SQUARE THEATRE — The theory sometimes advanced that a good magazine story does not mean a good picture certainly was refuted last evening when Viola Dana appeared at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia Theatre as the heroine of "The Chorus Girl's Romance." This was taken from the Saturday Evening Post story by F. Scott Fitzgerald, entitled "Head and Shoulders."

MODERN AND BEACON—A very attractive program is being served to the patrons of the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week—the first feature of which is Mary Miles Minter in a screen version of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's justly famous play, "Sweet Lavender," which will be fondly remembered by scores of the older generation of theatregoers.

WALDRON'S CASINO—The "Big Wonder Show," with George P. Murphy, was presented twice yesterday at Waldron's Casino by Joe Hurtig. It has won and held its popularity on its wholesomeness, its amusing, swift action, its wit of line and freshness of slang and its expertly delineated characterization. The splendid cast includes Mlle. Babette, Vera Hennici, Bertha Stoller, Perry sisters, Morck sisters and Clare Evans.

COLUMBIA THEATRE—Five acts of exceptionally clever and entertaining vaudeville, embracing comedy, singing and dancing, equilibristic feats and a melange of harmony numbers, headed the program at Loew's Columbia Theatre.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE—The presentation of "The Crimson Alibi," a melodramatic mystery play in a prologue and three acts, by the talented Somerville Players, was a distinct triumph for every member of the company. Yesterday's presentation marked the first stock offering of the play anywhere in this country, and Director Kendall Weston deserves great credit for the manner in which he staged it.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE—Singing, dancing, jesting, and in fact every form of variety entertainment is being offered at the Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester, this week with four acts of splendid vaudeville, followed by the first Dorchester showings of Lucy Cotton in "Blind Love."

MALDEN AUDITORIUM — Yesterday at the Malden Auditorium the Temple Stock Company presented Crothers' comedy, "39 East." As a comedy of present day American life in one of the popular strata, present in large cities this may well be said to be a gem in characterization and fidelity to conditions.

MUSICAL BILL PLEASES AT ORPHEUM

Harry Ward and Harriett Raymond topped an excellent bill of vaudeville yesterday at Loew's Orpheum Theatre in their delightful and original conception of melodies and humor, styled "Hello." It was a delightful bit of artistry that pleased and won the audience.

The Emry Quintet offered more music, but had a different style, and kept the audience enthused. And still more music, and delightful, too, came in the form of a hilarious song festival that put the audience in a humorous vein, the skit being "On the Wharf." Other splendid offerings were the Barra Sisters, in merry melodies; Ferrari and Stelle, in a singing and chattering skit, and the Oneda Boys, in an exploitation of Nipponese equilibristic stunts.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—The outstanding feature which has attracted large attention and caused favorable criticism in the musical world is a European operetta, "The Everlasting Melody," which is being staged at the Grand Opera House under the direction of Julius Niffenabb.

BROADWAY THEATRE — The Broadway Theatre, South Boston's new and beautiful home of vaudeville and movie pictures, opened its new program for the first half of this week to very large attendances, both yesterday afternoon and last evening. The vaudeville features included the Royal Hawaiian Four, in native singing, music and dancing; Green and LaPell, lyric and melody specialists; Milt Collins, "The Patriot," and the Gypsy Songsters, in a spectacular singing offering. The feature photoplay for the first half of the week is J. Stuart Blackton's presentation of Herbert Rawlinson in "Passers By," in which W. J. Ferguson, the veteran actor, has a leading role.

Coming Events

PARK SQUARE THEATRE — "The Broken Wing," a comedy drama of bandit-ridden Mexico, an American aviator and a Mexican girl, comes to the Park Square Theatre next Monday night. This powerful drama, abounding in scenic novelties, tense situations and witty lines, was written by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard, authors of those well-remembered popular successes "The Misleading Lady" and "The Ghost Breaker."

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—Starting next Monday evening, A. H. Woods will present his favorite comedian, Barney Bernard, in the very latest Montague Glass comedy, "His Honor, Abe Potash," at the Plymouth Theatre.

MAJESTIC THEATRE—That D. W. Griffith has scored another triumph in his picturization of Lottie Blair Parker's rural classis, "Way Down East," there can be no doubt. The critics of New York, where the production was first shown on September 3, were unanimous in their praises of his work. It opens at the Majestic Theatre next Monday.

Plays That Remain

MAJESTIC THEATRE — "The Little Whopper" will finish its engagement at the Majestic Theatre on Saturday night, and will then play Providence, New Haven, Springfield, and Buffalo, en route to Chicago.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—The last week of the engagement of that hilarious farce "Mrs. Jimmie Thompson" began last evening at the Plymouth Theatre.

SHUBERT THEATRE—"East West" one of the most interesting plays of the season, is holding the close attention of large audiences at the Shubert Theatre, where its success was instantaneous. It began the second week last evening of what gives promise of being a record run.

WILBUR THEATRE — All roads apparently lead to the Wilbur Theatre, where "Irene" is nightly playing to raucously audiences. This smart show is in a class by itself and abounds in good music, catchy tunes, and several novel dances. It is good entertainment, given by capable artists.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—"Nightie Night" is now in the last week of its Boston engagement. Francis Byrne, who is firmly established as one of the best liked favorites of the present day, has been surrounded by a splendid cast.

COLONIAL THEATRE — "Hitchy Koo 1920" began the second week of its engagement at the Colonial Theatre last evening. This big, many-starred musical production appears to have hit Boston theatregoers most favorably.

TREMONT THEATRE—"Shavings," at the Tremont Theatre, began its final fortnight last night to an audience that gave every manifestation of enjoyment of the entertainment provided by this clever and amusing play. This comedy has made as popular a hit in Boston as it did in New York, where it had a notable run.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE—"Chu Chin Chow" entered on the second week of its tremendous and overwhelming success at the Boston Opera House yesterday, and long lines of people throng this long-new amusement house to witness the sensational dramatization of the very core of Metropolitan life; the things that happen behind closed doors in the middle of the night; the crimes that one reads about daily in the glaring headlines of the newspapers.

GLOBE THEATRE—Weather forecast for second week and until further notice at the Globe Theatre: Showers of real rain, "Pitter Patter" of mirth, melody and dance; thunders of applause, and a rainbow of feminine loveliness that gives promise of long and continued popularity of the dainty, tuneful and clever musical comedy seen here in many years.

GAIETY THEATRE—"The Flashlights of 1920" flashed most successfully at the Gaiety Theatre last night with "Shorty" McAllister and Harry Shannon as the flashes that revealed the best comedy twinkles seen in the house this season. Jimmy Slater and Elsie Stradley sang their songs and carried the slight plot along most satisfactorily.

CAMBRIDGE CENTRAL SQUARE—How a girl recruited the sturdy Kentucky mountaineers is shown in "Heart o' the Hills," in which Mary Pickford was shown last evening at Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre.

JAZZ NIGHT AT THE CRESCENT GARDENS

A great musical festival and "Jazz night" will be held tonight at the magnificent Crescent Gardens Ball Room, Revere Beach. The famous Pemberton Inn Jazz Band, known everywhere as the last word in jazz music, will play in a battle of music against the Crescent Gardens Singing Orchestra. There will be continuous music, without intermission, until midnight, and needless to say, all the dance enthusiasts will be there. Dance lovers of Greater Boston are looking forward with much pleasure to the Fall and Winter season at Crescent Gardens, which is as large and popular as in the Summer season.

W. J. FERGUSON TO SEE HIMSELF ON SCREEN

Vivienne Segal, Harry C. Browne, W. J. Ferguson and all the principals and chorus of "The Little Whopper" visited the Broadway Theatre this afternoon to accept the management's invitation to witness the photoplay, "Passers By," in which Mr. Ferguson has an important role. This was the first time Mr. Ferguson has seen himself on the screen in "Passers By."

Pops Tonight

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Pops in Symphony Hall, has arranged an interesting program for tonight, including a violin solo. The Business Women's Club have taken a block of seats, but this concert will be in every sense public. The program follows:

1—Overture to "Mignon" ..... Thomas
2—Waltz, "Roses from the South" ..... Strauss
3—Entrechtes (children at play) ..... Van Westerhout
4—Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah" ..... Saint-Saens
5—Suite, "L'Arlesienne," No. 2 ..... Bizet
6—Gipsy Melodies (Zigeuner Weisen) ..... Sarasate
Mr. Jacchia, Violinist
7—Ride of the Valkyries ..... Wagner
8—Rhapsody, Kossuth ..... Chalette
9—Fantasia, "I Pagliacci" ..... Leoncavallo
10—Largo (with organ) ..... Handel
11—March of the Little Lead Soldiers ..... Pierne
12—March Militaire Francaise ..... Saint-Saens

Worth Taking a Long Journey to See

The Wonderful Block-Long Window Display OF Fall Fashions at White's This Week

is attracting the attention and admiration of thousands.

The windows are so beautiful and informing—they so dramatically portray the New Styles that not to see them will mean a lost chapter in current events.

However, the Fall incoming rush of new things is on. For this reason these windows can remain in only a few days.

As you go from window to window note the little information cards that tell the names of the materials and trimmings which make up the various garments on view.

He sure could make "good eaters"

HE had the knack of mixing candy—George Close. You couldn't fool him on a "good eater," the men who worked with him say.

It's the knack in the mixing that makes a "good eater." And the Chief passed his ways on to some of the younger men at Close's.

That's why today—specializing in chocolate covered bars, they can make them "good eaters."

Top grade candy whenever you want it—in a handy package to slip in your pocket. That's Close's idea. At drug stores, newsstands, fruit stores, just where you're passing. Chocolate covered peppermint, cocoanut or nougat—"good eaters" in bar form! The George Close Company, Cambridge, Mass.

IRELAND'S WRONGS UNDER BRITISH SUPPRESSION

By DOROTHY THOMPSON
Written for the Boston American.

London, Sept. 14.—What constitutes being suppressed in Ireland?

I must admit that I left the country without finding out.

The Industrial Commission for the investigation of Irish industries and resources, appointed by the Minister of Trade and Colonel Wedgwood, the Irish Republic, was suppressed. Everyone told me so. Everyone told me, also, that if I would go to a certain office in a well-known office building on a main street in Dublin, I would find someone who would tell me more about the commission.

Of course I found a spacious office. The walls were hung with maps of Ireland; charts showing cost deposits, graphs describing the course of the milk industry; pictures of harbors and fisheries; and a large desk overflowing with letters and reports not an in home gentleman deep in conversation with two callers, evidently bent on a serious business.

The left in a few minutes and he greeted me courteously.

"I want to find out something about the work of the former Industrial Commission," I said.

"This is the office of the Industrial Commission of the Irish Republic, if that is what you want," he replied, his eyes twinkling.

"But I thought the commission was suppressed?" I explained.

He roared with laughter at my naivete. "Of course it is—of course!" he said.

"But you are carrying on"——

"Of course we are—of course," he said.

COMMISSION IS "SUPPRESSED"

Then he gave me his definition of "being suppressed." "We aren't in the directory, and we don't have a telephone."

"That must be very inconvenient," I commiserated.

"Not at all!" was the cheerful reply. "We use our neighbor's telephone, and everyone knows where we are."

And then for an hour he described to me the work of the commission. "When the Republic was set up," he explained, "we all realized that we had to do more than merely defend ourselves. We had to do constructive work. Sinn Fein had elected a government, and this government straightway appointed a minister. The Minister of Trade, who is a very clever young economist—a Professor by the way—assembled together business men, manufacturers, farmers, professors—the most able men he could find—and appointed them an Industrial Commission. He did not even ask them whether they were Republicans. He didn't subject them to any rules. He told them to find out what was the matter with Irish industry study the dairy business, the fisheries, the unused resources, and report to the Republic, with recommendations.

"Now, of course, since from the English point of view the republic is illegal, and when we went down into the west of Ireland to hold open sittings on the question of the milk supply we were refused public buildings; soldiers attended our hearings, and finally we were declared an illegal assembly. So we took our name out of the telephone book."

"SEDITIOUS" DOCUMENT.

"Let me present you with a seditious document," he said. "It is our first report—on the conditions of the dairy industry in Ireland."

It was an inoffensive looking document, bound tolerably enough in an orange cover, and devoted to a technical discussion of cow-teats, butter analyses, the organization of creameries, etc. Only the introduction branded it. It was addressed to Arthur Griffith, Acting President of the Irish Republic, and began, "In accordance with your instructions"——

And then this Irishman plunged into an enthusiastic discussion of Irish resources. "They have coal there is no coal in Ireland. There are at least a hundred million tons in one area alone. Ireland has six billion tons of peat, with a coal equivalent of three billion tons. Ireland has a longer coast than England, and opportunities for developing the finest fisheries in the world. Enterprise today depends on the creation of joint-stock companies, and these depend on the national circulation of capital and then on a free market and competition for their sale. None of that is yet possible in Ireland. There is no money market in Ireland; the circulation of capital is centred in London—but wait"——

Going out, I encountered the neighbor with the convenient telephone. "Who is that gentleman?" I asked, nodding toward the door.

"That," he answered, "is one of the assistant secretaries. A special expert on coal."

The next morning I read, in a conservative London paper, that there was "reason to believe" that the Republican government was "contemplating activity in Ireland."

THAT IRISH WIT.

One thing that is not suppressed in Ireland is the unquenchable spirit of laughter among the people. Even in these dark times an Irishman never quits. He sees films if a the situation seriously. Another member of this same commission—the secretary, indeed, Mr. Darrell Figgis—very narrowly escaped hanging when he went with this commission to the west of Ireland to hold an open hearing on some industrial question. He was arrested by an officer, court-martialled on the spot and sentenced to be hanged. The officer even went so far as to send out for "twenty feet of rope," and the Irishman saved himself only by a verbal filibuster worthy of Robert M. LaFollette. Had this Protestant Irishman, who has been disinherited of a fortune because of his Sinn Fein sympathies, been in Dublin the country would have been ablaze with indignation. As it is, his national reception of the officer "awash with liquor" his inimitable mimicry of the court-martial, his pipe of himself, eyeing the rope and calmly cutting out a long discourse upon the absolute necessity of feeding all cows, while a companion looked frantically for a less drunken officer with whom to reason—the whole story is the laughter of Ireland.

Nor does Ireland seem particularly concerned with the fate of the officer. He was given a less important post as a consequence of his act, but whether the rebuke was because of attempted murder, or whether it was because he failed, neither Figgis nor Ireland appears to know.

(The third in this series of articles will be published in the American tomorrow.)

Editor American: I wish to compliment the Boston American on the very able manner in which it conducted what was probably the greatest bicycle parade ever held.

I wish also to express my sincere thanks for the "Black Beauty" bicycle awarded me in the "old timers'" high wheel class; and, while I cannot agree to entirely discontinue riding my good "Old Ordinary," I shall endeavor to wear out my new mount and not let it rust out.

STAR JUMPER TO AID FIELD DAY

Louis Guertin, World's Champion, to Defend His Title at Weymouth Carnival

Louis Guertin, world's champion high and all-around jumper, will defend his title against all comers at the Weymouth tornado benefit, to be held at the Weymouth fair grounds next Saturday.

In addition, Guertin, through the Boston American, will stage his skill in athletic events not in competition.

This announcement follows the summary of the big amateur events which will be a feature of the monster benefit.

These events include the ten-mile handicap run, under the auspices of the Boston American, one-mile handicap, quarter-mile run, 100-yard run and other contests in which athletes of world fame will compete.

BIG PROGRAM OUTLINED.

Entry blanks for the summer events may be obtained at Wright & Ditson and Horace Partridge Company stores, Boston Athletic Association and Boston American office.

Guertin, a Weymouth resident, was the world's jumping title in 1913 and has held the record ever since. In 1914 he defeated Robert Spicer in a match held in England and added to his laurels the world's champion strider.

The athletic events, while they will form a prominent feature of the big benefit to reimburse those who lost their homes or property in the tornado which swept Weymouth in August, will not be the only attraction offered the public.

The Old Colony Club, one of the storm sufferers, will furnish a racing card, while the various organizations in the section will supply booths, minstrel entertainments and ball teams to enliven the occasion.

PRIZES SELECTED.

The American ten-mile handicap has already drawn several prominent athletes into the event, and the names of the entries will soon be ready for announcement.

All entry blanks should be sent to John Reidy, chairman of the field day committee, No. 49 Union street, Weymouth.

At meetings of the general committee and field day committee all plans for the field day have been completed. The various organizations are preparing floats, exhibitions and manufacturers have secured the prizes for the different contests.

George V. Brown, secretary of the Boston Athletic Association and trainer of the American Olympic team, who returned a little over a week ago from Belgium, will be in personal charge of the amateur events. He will be assisted by Hugh McGrath.

Remember the day, Saturday, September 18, Weymouth Fair Ground.

CHAPLIN WILL KEEP MONEY

Wife Will Never Get Half of it, Movie Comedian, Now Serious, Declares

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 14.—Charlie Chaplin was in no mood for throwing custard meringue pies today. He had laid away his working clothes, including mustache and trick cane, and was engaged in the serious pursuit of trying to ascertain his status. Between conferences with his lawyer regarding his domestic troubles with his wife, Mr. Chaplin outlined his plight as follows:

"My wife claims I am a Bolshevik and that I have a fortune of $3,000,000. If I am a Bolshevik, I would have to split up my money. If I admit being a capitalist, everybody I know will be coming around for a touch.

"One thing is certain: I am now a resident of New York. I have said good-by to California.

"And my wife will never get half of my money. All she can do is sue for divorce and ask for alimony."

Remove Those Hairs —Roots and All! (Absolutely New Method)

The new way to remove disfiguring growths of superfluous hair, roots and all, will astonish and delight you. You never saw or heard of anything like it before. It is not a depilatory and not electrical. You simply get a stick of plelactine from your druggist and follow the easy directions at home. In a few seconds you have removed the offending hairs, roots and all. With your own eyes you see the roots come right out. Phelactine is absolutely harmless, non-poisonous and perfectly odorless.—Advertisement

Doctors Recommend Bon-Opto for the Eyes

Physicians and eye specialists prescribe Bon-Opto as a safe home remedy in the treatment of eye troubles and to strengthen eyesight. Sold under money refund guarantee by all druggists.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for two or three minutes. When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results, see that you get real delatone.—Advertisement.

SLATTERY MAY SUCCEED STALLINGS AS BRAVES MANAGER

HARD JOB TO BUILD UP TEAM

Miracle Man May Quit at End of Season—No Game Today

By NICK FLATLEY.

There's just one thing left to worry the local National League fans, as the Braves are playing the string out in these last days of the dying season—the 1921 manager of the Tribe.

Early in the Spring Manager Stallings declared that this would be his last campaign as a leader, and thus far he hasn't retracted or changed his mind, or anything. Personally, we don't imagine that the Georgian will get out of baseball—don't think he could leave the game if he wanted to—but it's just about certain that he will bid Boston a farewell in a couple of weeks.

His path hasn't been strewn with roses, at all times here, and by the same token, there's plenty of trouble ahead for the successor. Building up a team, without command of a bankroll such as bolsters the Giants and Yankees is tougher than beating down a landlord.

Slattery Logical Choice for Job

The appointment of a local individual would be more or less an innovation, and very popular. Scout Slattery has shown that he can teach the flock or baseball he knows, with both his Tufts and Harvard teams. He is still under contract to the Crimson, but a big league managership might have the financial power to woo him away from the collegians.

Harvard Jack has followed a somewhat similar trail to Fred Mitchell, now boss of the Cubs. Fred was a Brave coach, then scout, and finally a successful manager. Jack has efficiently filled the first three jobs, and would attain the ultimate now with at least as complete a stock of baseball strategy and knowledge as Mitch packed when he steered his Cubs right into a title.

Scott Has Good Day; Adams Only Fair

Which is apart from the fact that the revivified Braves took on the Pirates once more at the Wigwam today. The natives have collected four games in a row, and have chucked the harpoon into a couple of pennant hooms. They are playing very snappy baseball, just to show the patient supporters that they have it in them, no doubt.

They blanked the Pirates in the opening game of a series, a joust staged on a soggy, heavy field, and plentifully sprinkled with showers. Big John Scott had one of his good days, and was discovered for three little singles, and the hostiles never had a chance of scoring. Jack didn't issue a single pass, either.

The game slated for today was called off, but two will be played with the Pirates tomorrow.

Albemarle Golf

Beginning Friday and continuing through Saturday an open golf tournament will be held on the Albemarle Club links.

Winchester Open Tourney

An open golf tournament will be staged at the Winchester Country Club tomorrow. Play will continue through Thursday.

4,000,000 PEOPLE

Annually use these tablets of organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to build up red blood, strength and endurance.

Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital and a Medical Examiner says: "There are thousands whose bodies are ageing and breaking down at a time when they should be enjoying that perfect health which carries defiance to disease simply because they are not awake to the condition of their blood. By allowing it to remain pale and watery, they are not giving the natural life forces of the body a chance to do their work. Iron a red blood food and in my experience I have found no other means for building the red blood corpuscles and helping to give increased power to the blood than organic iron—Nuxated Iron." Nuxated Iron comes in tablet form only and does not contain any ordinary metallic iron but only the purest quality of predigested organic iron which is easily assimilated by the blood.

READY TO FIGHT SAYS GEORGES

Dempsey Must Wait, However, Until 1921, Declares the French Champion

New York, Sept. 14.—Georges Carpentier, heavyweight champion of Europe, who arrived from France yesterday to fight Battling Levinsky at Ebbets Field on October 12, following which he is expected to meet Jack Dempsey for the world's title, established training quarters at Summitt, N. J., today.

Carpentier said he was ready to fight Jack Dempsey or "anybody else in the world."

There is one condition to his promise to meet Dempsey, however, and that is that the fight shall not take place until after December 31, the date of the expiration of his contract with Charles Cochran, the British promoter.

Nevertheless, he is prepared to sign a contract for conclusions with the American title-holder at once.

Carpentier emphasized his conviction that he can take care of the American without dangerous difficulty in case the papers are signed.

He believes that he is far superior to Dempsey as a boxer, he told the interpreter, and that he will "be there with the punch" when the time comes.

SPORT EDITORIAL

Print the FACTS

If anyone is in possession of FACTS concerning crooked work in baseball, he should present these FACTS to the public.

This whispering behind the hand, this "it is said" business, is commencing to nauseate the fans.

It is a grave injustice to honest ball players and to the game itself.

Several players have been banished from the big leagues on grounds never made explicit. Veiled charges have been made against others.

Rumors of new scandals bob up from day to day. Warnings are uttered against permitting gamblers to get control of baseball without any information of a definite character being produced to show why these warnings are deemed so necessary.

It is time for Johnson and Heydler, the heads of the leagues, to say something. If they have proof they should let it be known.

By their silence in the face of dirty insinuation they are only harming their own game.

Cut out the RUMOR, and give us the FACTS.

First Cut in Harvard Squad Due Tonight

Harvard's first football cut is due tonight when fifty men are retained for further varsity tryouts. The remaining players will form the second squad and be in charge of Jimmie Knox, the veteran scout and football tactician. Further cuts in the varsity will be made as the season progresses until a squad of thirty-five men remains.

Kit Kane and Charlie Tierney are the latest Harvard absentees to report. Kane played right tackle last year and was a member of the regular eleven. There is great need of skilful ends on the squad and Charlie Coolidge jumped at the chance to add Kane to his troupe.

Tierney is an old Boston College player. He weighed 193 pounds and as he is a six-footer should make an ideal man for the job. Bubbles Haveymeyer, the regular center, will have lots of fight on his hands with Tierney on the ice. Henry Clark, who played centre on last year's freshmen, has also reported.

Coach Henry Sprague is helping develop punters, and as the material looks promising the chances are that two or three extra fine kickers will be the result.

Ernie Soucy, who played end on Eddie Mahan's 1915 team, is also coaching and handled the centres in the absence of Dewis Parmenter.

Heavy work starts immediately. Strenuous sessions with the dummy will be the daily menu for the next two or three weeks. Tackleless scrimmages start almost immediately while Friday may see a regular old-time battle between the twenty-two foremost men on the varsity squad.

RED SOX TRY OUT NEW ATTACK

Opening Game Against St. Louis Finds Recruit Playing for Hooper

St. Louis, Sept. 14.—The system of using the right-handed hitting strength against the left-handed pitchers has been added to Ed Barrow's attack. George Stallings used it successfully with his 1914 Braves and many other leaders followed suit. Barrow put it on trial against the Browns when he benched Harry Hooper to try out Reginald Paschal. Paschal won in two of the four runs scored against Baynes' southpaw twisters.

With three on in the second inning he singled to right and drove in only one because Menosky was caught at the plate by Tobin's throw. In the seventh he sent Menosky in by a long single to right.

BOXING SHOW TO AID MONUMENT FUND

There will be a boxing show at the Chelsea Theatre tomorrow night to aid the Monument Fund of Everett square. A bronze tablet will be erected to keep alive the memory of Chelsea boys who made the supreme sacrifice in the war.

Included in the list of boxers who will show tomorrow night are "Kid" Lee, Barney Snyder, Tommy Reagan, Nate Siegal, Billy Fitzsimmons, South Boston Johnny Downes, Scotty Welsh, Al Lacey, Joe Nelson, Joe White, Young Leonard, Freddy O'Brien and Harry Carlson.

BIG MAT STARS TO BATTLE

Ketonen and Sanders in Feature Bout at Opera House on Thursday

Wrestling will get under way on a large scale at the Grand Opera House next Thursday night. George Tuohey has arranged three matches which should bring out some brilliant grappling features.

Waino Ketonen, the middleweight champion, and Cyclone Sanders of Brooklyn are paired for the final event. Sanders is said to be an exceedingly clever fellow and one who will make Ketonen show all he possesses in knowledge of the mat game.

While Ketonen always puts up a satisfactory battle, he doesn't seem to attain his full speed until he has engaged in three or four matches. In his early season form he is not at his best, and Sanders undoubtedly realizes this.

BIG SQUAD FOR HUNTINGTON

Back Bay School Has Fine Outlook on Gridiron for Coming Season

Among the prep schools that have prospects of a fast eleven this year is Huntington School. Coach Monty Moore, who successfully led the team the last three years, is again elected to take charge of the affairs. Dr. Colton, formerly physical trainer at Roxbury Latin, will assist Coach Moore in the handling of the athletics. School officially opens September 23, but the call for football candidates has been set for September 22. The old stone of the Red Sox will be the scene of all the practise and a good part of the games that are played at home.

Bill Clemons of Malden High, Manning of Lynn English and Goodall of Beverly are some of the former high school stars that will heed the call. In addition to these players there will be eight first string men of last year's teams who are also eligible to play.

First Bouts Under New Law to Be Held in Mechanics Building Tonight

By JACK CONWAY.

Legalized boxing will make merry into one initial tonight when the Armory A. A. stages a show at Mechanics Building. It will be the first entertainment offered under the new boxing bill which elevated the ring game from a pastime in the gutter to one alongside of baseball, football, golf and the other great athletic pastimes of America.

Everything will be conducted according to the boxing law and rulings of the commission. Decisions will be rendered by nine judges, as the event of a disagreement the referee will give the verdict. The boxers will be examined by a regularly physician before they enter the ring. There will also be a representative of the commission on hand to see that everything is conducted in an orderly manner.

The feature bouts of ten rounds will find Nate Siegal of Revere swapping blows with Paddy Flynn, sturdy Everett welter.

Willie Corbett of Technology and Billy Fitzsimmons of Chelsea will engage in a contest in another ten-round match.

Marty Mahoney of Atlantic will have Bert Jones of Revere as an opponent over the eight-round route, while Young Gould of Brockton and Danny Judge of New York are also billed to battle eight sessions.

BILLY FITZSIMMONS TO BOX BILLY MURPHY

Billy Fitzsimmons of Chelsea and Billy Murphy of Staten Island have been matched to meet at a show to be held in connection with the big fair at Rochester, N. H., September 22.

ST. PAUL WINS TITLE IN AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

This Day in History—September 14, 1920

THIS is the anniversary of the death of Montcalm, on the heights of Abraham, in 1759, in the great battle with Wolfe for the possession of Quebec. Wolfe also died on the field. The battle ended French dominion in Canada.

HELIOTROPE

"Heliotrope," from the story by Richard Washburn Child, is a Cosmopolitan production released as a Paramount-Artcraft picture.

Directed by George D. Baker.

Screen Version Novelized

By Jane McLean.

HE watched, keenly registering her expressions as she reached the latter part of the note wherein Heliotrope Harry denounced her. She laughed, then settled herself on the bed and opened the paper. Spike saw her raise her head, as though she had seen a ghost.

As he sat, mirror in hand, gazing at the woman in the next room, Spike was surer than ever that the letter she had been reading was the note addressed to him by her former husband. Even after she had finished reading and had crumpled up the paper and thrown it into the waste basket he continued to watch her. When she half lay on the bed reading the Sunday supplement, he noticed that she seemed startled at something she had seen.

At this moment he waited for nothing further, but withdrawing his arm and laying down the mirror, he picked up his own paper and turned with a feverish hand to the illustrated section.

Whole Page

Then he started back—no wonder Joe Haddock had shown her amusement, for there, taking up a whole page, was the story of Alice Hale, the nameless waif from the convent, now engaged to be married to Jimmie Andrews, son of the lumber king, and one of the big men of the Southwest.

From convent walls to a palace —Spike Foley choked back a fear that rose in his throat. It was plain enough that the amusement of Joe Haddock had been caused by some reference to Alice in the letter and the hearing out of that reference by the amazing story in the paper.

Dropping the paper, Spike again made use of the mirror; he watched the woman next door slip from the bed, leaving the paper spread out with the face of Alice Hale smiling up to the ceiling.

Joe had paused to light a cigarette; she laid this aside, and, kneeling in front of a trunk that served also as a chair, unlocked it, opened it, lifted out two trays, and then began to search diligently among a lot of papers at the bottom.

All this Spike saw in the mirror. At last her search seemed to be rewarded, for she fished out a folded sheet, glanced at it, hugged it to her breast and laughed with the delighted triumph of one who sees a chance to escape from the bondage of poverty.

As she sat there on the floor surrounded by numerous bits of personal apparel that she had taken about her shelter she presented a picture that sent a chill to the heart of the man who watched her. Whatever evil was in her mind he knew well enough it had to do with the fortunes of the daughter of his old chum, Heliotrope Harry.

And he registered a vow then that, mother of the girl though she was, she would never ruin the child's life while he had power to prevent it.

The woman relaxed, reopened the letter, smoothed it out and began to compare it with the article. As she read, her face assumed more and more an expression of cunning, as though fate had at last placed in her hands a weapon that could be made to produce gold.

She read the birth certificate of Anula Haddock, her own child, but without elation that that child had been found. There was in her yearning stirring in her heart as the possibility of seeing this daughter, lovely and loved, suddenly become a reality.

One vision only sat her brain on fire, and that was a mirage wherein she saw a mountain of gold paid to her for a silent tongue. She laid the note with the certificate and the page of the paper, folded them together and, stuffing them into her bosom, began to lay plans whereby she might soonest and most effectually reap the harvest she saw beckoning to her.

No Consequence

Delay was of no consequence, but Joe Haddock acted as though the loss of a moment meant possible failure. She darted out of the room and, descending the stairs, seated herself at a small telephone and called the number of a money lender with whom she had had dealings in her more prosperous days. The voice of the latter end of the telephone protested.

"I got something that'll interest you," said Joe. "Neither a Sunday. You've nothing to do—it's a chance, you'd better come."

The man promised and Joe hung up the phone as Spike stepped back to his room more certain than before that there was a plot that affected Alice.

There was nothing to do but wait. Joe Haddock availed herself of the interval to dress with all the care at her command. And before the arrival of the money lender presented the appearance of a middle-aged woman of elegant leisure.

IN August I wish it was like this. And I cannot remember that it ever WAS cold—and I think it would be lovely to be half frozen and have long icicles on elbows and nose.

IN December, however, I'm wishing it could be like THIS. And it does not seem possible that I ever was warm enough and wanted to fall in the water to cool off.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

TOWARD evening of the loneliest day I ever worried through a day in my mother's home, I opened it with a trembling anticipation and found a card which read:

"With love to our darling sister Babbie. We wish her only half that joy she deserves because that's about all one mortal could endure.

"PHOEBE and NEAL."

The box revealed brush, comb and mirror of exquisite French enamel in a marvelous shade of pinkish orchid. Beauty and love were here, and I held them to my heart in dumb yearning to have them comfort me and make me happy. But they left me cold.

My little clock chimed six—the cruel day was almost over. Then another ring sounded. It was the telephone, which had been perversely silent all day, when I longed for any company—even the sound of a voice over the wire.

"Mrs. Harrison?" asked the operator. "Hold the wire, please. Long distance wants you. Hold the wire for—"

An indistinguishable blur sounded. Then a "Go ahead!"

"That you, Anne? That you, dear?" asked the voice I loved best in the world. The sun came sweeping out from the gray retreat and poured into the windows of my heart.

"Yes, I hear you, Jim, and it makes me so happy," I said.

"What do you think of me for reeling off so madly, dear? I was completely taken by surprise. Uncle Ned never gave me a hint that he'd want me to come along. He got the inspiration last night and thought I'd be tickled to look over some copper properties, get in a bit of fishing and sip wine with Pat. Understand, dear?"

"Yes," I replied happily, "I understand everything now. As long as you didn't have a chance to call you could not help but know that I'd be home. After I had thanked him for his wonderful gift, I blurted out the truth about Jim's absence from the city.

"Babbie, darling—you precious old goose!" came back from Neal. "Don't stop to telephone Phoebe about our little gift. I'm going right around to call for her and we'll come to fetch you in half an hour. Not a word. Think we'd let you spend your birthday alone? Get into your clothes now and be ready when we come, Babbie. So long."

My theory was soon put to the test—for when Neal and Phoebe escorted me to the quiet and exclusive roof garden which we selected for our celebration, the very first person I spied was Tom Mason tucked off in a dimly lighted corner and seemingly oblivious to all that went on around him.

Ordered a Waltz

Hunched down in the chair opposite to him was a girl I couldn't make out in the half light. Tom was all devotion, but I conquered my inclination to condemn him for philandering again and gave all my attention to my beloved host and hostess.

But Neal arose and, seizing me masterfully by the elbow, fairly pulled me from my chair.

"Oh, how I love to have the dear girls fighting over the honor of my hand in a waltz," he laughed; "but come along, Birthday Girl—there's no escaping."

"You are sweet, generous darling!" I flung at Phoebe as we departed.

Joyously Neal and I flung out to the soft strains of the popular Hawaiian waltz. For several moments I was conscious of nothing but the rhythm of the sobbing yet laughing music and of gliding along as part of it. Then a face—startled and uneasy—stood out. Tom again. He worried my eyes, and I refrained from looking toward him. As the last encore began I saw him move. The girl, fairly shaking out with him, was Daisy Condon.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND
Plunkett

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

PLUNKETT

VARIATIONS — Blanchet, Whittle, Whittlesey.

RACIAL ORIGIN—Norman-French, also Anglo-Saxon.

SOURCE—A Nickname.

THE family names of this group have wandered far, very far, from their original forms, with the exception of Whittle, which is not recognizable to the average person because it comes from a word now obsolete.

Whittlesey comes from the name of a town, which in turn took its name from this word.

The word in modern English is "blanket." But it did not have the same meaning in medieval times as it has today. "Blanket" was the Norman word, derived from the French "blanche," meaning white. "Whittle" was the Anglo-Saxon word, derived from the same root as our modern word "white." In the speech of medieval England either "blanket" or "whittle" meant white cloth, that is to say, colorless cloth. In reality it was not white, but merely not dyed. It was the garb of the poorer people, and like nearly everything associated with the daily life of people in the days when the need for surnames was developing, it was called into use in connection with men's names as a mark of differentiation. Those who bore the names in this group when they were still sobriquets or nicknames did so because they were customarily garbed in this kind of cloth, or perhaps because they traded in it.

"Plunket" is an early corrupted spelling of the word. One law of Richard III, relating to this cloth calls it "plonket."

Our modern use of the word "blanket" to denote a woolen bed covering is of comparatively recent development, and from it we have derived a number of similes with the general meaning of "cover all," which have no relation to the original meaning.

"NO, it won't do, Stevie. I want all that you are, all that you have to give the man you love and marry; all that the future holds of beauty and of mystery for us both. . . . I want a home with you, Steve; I want every minute of life with you, waking and sleeping. . . . I love you, Stevie. . . .

And because I do love you I dare tell you that I am failing in love with the very thought of—your children, Steve. . . . Dear, I think that I am like my father. I love only once. And once in love, there is nothing else for me; no other woman, no recompense if you fail me, no cure for me."

"They were both deadly serious now; his face was very quiet but set in firm and sober lines; she had lost much of her color, so that the gray eyes with their dark lashes seemed unusually large.

Still a Secret

"I can't marry you," she said, drawing his head nearer. "Do you think for one moment that I would deny you anything you asked of me if it were in my power to give?"

"Will you not tell me why?"

"I'm not free to tell you. . . .

Oh, Jim! I adore you—I do love you so—so deeply. I'm married. I'm sorry I'm married. But I can't help it—I can't get rid of it. Scares me even to think of trying"—

"What hold has that man"——

"No hold. There's something else—something sad, terrible"——

"I'll take you, anyway," he said in a low, tense voice. "He will have his remedy."

"How, Jim? Do you mean that you wish me to defy opinion with you? You wouldn't have me do that, would you, dear? I'd do it if you asked, but you wouldn't let me, would you?"

"No." He had lost his head for a moment; that was all; and the ugly threat had been wrenched out of him in the confusion of a tortured mind struggling against it knew not what.

"Jim," she asked under her breath, "would you really let me?"

"No," he said savagely.

"I knew you wouldn't."

Her arm slipped from his neck and again she clasped both slender hands, rested them on his shoulder, and laid her cheek against them.

"It wouldn't help me out of this pickle if we misbehaved," she said thoughtfully. "It wouldn't solve the problem. . . . I suppose you've taken me seriously as an apostle of that new liberty which ignores irregularities—doesn't admit them to be irregular. That's why you said what you did say, I fancy."

"I've talked enough modern foolishness to have you think me quite emancipated—quite indifferent to the social order, the old code of morals, the old dogmas, the ancient and orthodox laws of community and individual conduct. . . .

"What do I care about myself"—she said. She snapped her fingers. "I don't care that, Jim, when your happiness is at stake! I'd go to you, go with you, love you, face the world undaunted. I care nothing about myself. I know myself! What am I? You know!"

She came up close to him, her face afire, her gray eyes brilliant.

"You know what I am," she repeated. "You and dad did everything to make me like yourselves. You took me out of the gutter!"

"Steve!"

"You took me out of the gutter!" she repeated excitedly.

"Oh, Jim," she stammered, "I haven't even told you how those inherited traits have raised the devil with me. I've got in me all the low instincts, all the lawlessness, the selfish laziness, the haphazard irresponsible, devil-may-care traits of the man who was my own father!"

"Steve!"

"Let me tell you! I've got to tell you. I can't keep it any longer. . . . It was something in Oswald that appealed to that gypsy side of me—awoke it, I think. The first time I ever saw him, as a boy, and under disagreeable circumstances, I felt an odd inclination for him. He was like me, and I sensed it! I told you that once. It's true. Something in him appealed to the vagabond recklessness and irresponsibility latent in me—the tendency to wander, the indolent desire to drift and explore pleasant places. . . . After you went abroad I met him. I wrote you about it. I liked him. He fascinated me. There was something in common—something common in common between us. . . . I went to his studio, at first with Helen, and also when others were there. Then I went alone. I didn't care, knowing there was really no harm in going, and also being at the age when defiance of convention is more or less attractive to every girl.

"He was fascinating. He was plainly in love with me. But that means nothing to a girl except the subtle excitement and flattery of the fact. But he was what I wanted—a fellow vagabond!

All Right, But Not Good

"Every time I came into town I went to his studio. My aunt had no idea what I was up to. And we did have such good times, Jim!—you see he was successful then, and we ran out into the country and then returned to take tea in his studio. And, im, it was all right—but it was not good for me.'

She clasped his arm with both of hers and rested her head on his shoulder; and went on talking in a steadier and more subdued voice;

"I didn't write you about it; I was very sure you wouldn't approve. And my head was stuffed full of modernism and liberty and urge and the necessity for self-expression. I felt that I had a perfect right to enjoy myself. And then came trouble. It always does. Oswald's father, Chiltern Grimser, came to the hospital one day, terribly wrought up and looking ghastly.

"My aunt had gone to New York to consult a specialist, but he asked for me, and I came down to his private reception room. I was a graduate nurse then. Oh, Jim!—it was quite dreadful. He seemed to be scared until he saw that I was. Then he was fearfully harsh with me. He told me that my aunt was about to begin suit against him to recover some money—a great deal of money—which my aunt pretended I should have inherited from my grandmother, Mr. Grimser's sister.

"He said we were two adventuresses and that he would expose me and my unhappy origin—all that horror of my childhood. . . .

A sob checked her; she rested in his arms breathing fast and irregularly; then, recovering self-control:

"I was bewildered. I told him I didn't want his money. But there was in his eyes a terror which I could see there even when he was upbraiding and threatening me most violently. I didn't know what to do; I wanted to go back to my ward, but he followed me and held the door closed, and I had to listen to the terrible, shameful things he said about my mother's mother and my own mother and myself.

A Frightful Scene

"Well, just as he was about to leave, my aunt entered. I was in tears, and Mr. Grimser's face was all twisted and contorted with rage, as I thought; but it remained so, white and distorted, as though something had broken and he couldn't recover the mobility of his features. I heard what my aunt said to him—I didn't want to hear it. I cried out, protesting that I didn't wish any of his money. He went away with his face all twisted."

"What did your aunt say to him?"

"I can't tell you, dear. I am not at liberty to tell you. And, after all, it doesn't matter. He died—suddenly—a week later. My aunt was ill at the time and, I was with her. A letter was handed to her by an orderly. It was from Mr. Grismer—from a dead man! When she read it it seemed to be a terrific shock to her. She was sick and weak, but she got out of bed and telephoned to her attorneys in New York. I was frightened. It was a most dreadful night for me then. And—and my aunt died of it, I think—the shock and her illness combined. She died a week later. I took our studio with Helen.

New Hair Growth After BALDNESS

On legal affidavit, John Hart Brittain, business man, certified to this: "My head at the top and back was absolutely bare, the scalp was shiny. An expert said that he thought the hair roots were ratted, and there was no hope of my ever having a new hair growth. "Yet now, at an age over 50, I have a luxuriant growth of soft, strong lustrous hair! No trace of baldness. The pictures shown here are from my photographs." Mr. Brittain's affidavit is filed.

After hair growth.

INDIAN'S SECRET OF HAIR GROWTH

"As a time when I had become discouraged at trying various hair tonics, specialists' treatments, etc., I came across, in my travels, a Cherokee Indian 'medicine man' who had an elixir that he asseverated would grow my hair. Although I had but little faith, I gave it a trial. To my amazement a light fuzz soon appeared. It developed, day by day, into a healthy growth, and one long day hair was as profuse as in my youthful days.

Glad I met our astounded and happy to expressing my state of mind wildly. Obviously, as his hair had been dead, it was dormant in the scalp, awaiting the fertilizing potency of the mysterious pomade. I negotiated for and rushed into possession of my principle for preparing this mysterious elixir, now called Kotalko, and later had the privilege of securing the exclusive sale.

That my own hair growth was permanent has been amply proved."

How YOU May Grow YOUR Hair

It has been proved in very many cases that hair roots did not die even when the hair fell out through dandruff, alopecia areata or certain other hair or scalp disorders. Miss A. D. Otte reports: "About 6 years ago my hair began to fall out until my scalp in spots was almost entirely bald. I used everything that was recommended but was always disappointed until at last I came across Kotalko. In a few days after I had ordered now the growth is already about three inches long."

"I had spots completely bald, over which hair is now growing," writes Mr. Harold Kotalko. Mrs. Matilda Maxwell reports: "The whole front of my head was as bald as the palm of my hand for about 15 years. Since using Kotalko, hair is growing all over the place that was bald." Many more splendid reports from satisfied users.

PETAL GOWN IS FALL NOVELTY

Latest Styles from Paris Shown in Boston Fashion Display

Imports are the word. At least imports are the word with one Washington street and Summer street department store whose buyer has just returned from Paris with trunks full of creations. "Now when you speak of Paris this year," explains that authority, "just don't forget the Petal gown."

That gown is charmingly illustrated in pale green and blue and sheathing, and Summer street impersonates "plain in the neatness" is applicable to the distinguishing simplicity of the Petal gown, which is as it creeps—Monsieur creeps the French call it, a heavy crepe de chine.

The waist of all the gowns shown is altogether plain. The skirts are as their name indicates, soft and alluring.

HANDSOME WEDDING GOWN.

A wedding gown by Madeleine and Madeleine, of white crepe satin, this buyer has brought back as one of the oddest of her treasures, a confection of real thread lace, with flowers at the waist, of white veiling and silver. The long court train must interest the October bride. The harem skirt adopted by the Paris and oriental, it was one of the three wedding gowns shown, in Paris but one house and, with the real thing of the original model, it has arrived in Boston.

When it comes to the unusual, a little black velvet gown, by Lanvin with dashing panels of "billiard cloth," actually a felt like material, bonna-shaded, upon which are embroidered tracerries in several colors, is a favorite with all the dressmakers.

The evening gowns of peach bloom, and beaded gowns and gowns after Pagode, with up and down lines, waists running to the long, colors of royal blue and amethyst, brown and Pheasant red, and Chinese green, make autumn shopping delightful, in this store of the French imports.

NEW DESIGNS IN WRAPS.

And when it comes to illustrating the adaptability of lace to the Winter frock, there is the Jean Patou model with the celluloid rose at the waist, and a most stylish evening wrap with delicious peacock blue and chantilly lace, should never be forgotten by the woman who is interested in her Winter evening things, and there are many.

Here is the departure. Broadcloth has come back. In one clearly cut black model with sheerest linen at the neck and as underslaves. With a deep color of fringe, imitating monkey fur, so favored of the French, the model is a chaste bit of a dress, particularly for the woman in mourning.

Now for general things, which this store shows, apart from the gowns. The French shop first, has underwear. The Autumn bride should inspect their wonders. These mainings of lace and crepe and satin and sheerest white materials combine the poetry of beautiful clothes with the witchery of beautiful materials.

VELVET HATS AGAIN.

And velvet has come in strong for hats again, as the experts and show it in all manner of combinations. And for hosiery, the "georgette" hose are a theme of their own. And not only the ankle bands as well, crossing above the ankle and tying, are quite the thing for dressier foot wear. And then wraps.

These are luxurious, tapering in most models to the bottom of the skirt, with dog collars and furs. The models of the Fall of 1920 are joyous as can be, which Mrs. Boston finds out this week as she goes forth to choose her Winter wardrobe.

My trouble has left me entirely which treatment of the Osmo-Chemic physicians and should I ever be troubled with catarrh in any form I shall not hesitate in accepting the relief to the same source."

I have taken two courses in all and have done so much and more for Mine Hosts of Health, that I feel it a pleasure to recommend that Mike sent to the Osmo-Chemic Physicians for treatment and that I had found him on the car and that he now knows well and is also thankful to the Osmo-Chemic Physicians so as to enable him to be well and strong once more. Rheumatism must be sent to the Osmo-Chemic Physicians and they will cure it, and strong once more.

RAILS SELL AT YEAR HIGH

Oils, Steels and Equipments Advance, While Motor Issues Are Irregular

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, but profit taking in the second hour had reduced gains. Rails were leaders and Erie, New York Chicago & St. Louis and St. Louis & Southwestern were among those to sell at highest prices for the year. Steels and oils were showing gains, equipments were strong and motors were irregular. Trading was more active than it was Monday morning. First hour's transactions approximated 150,000 shares.

The strength of the market today reflected satisfaction in financial district over the result of the Maine election. Republic Motor was a feature and active issue, receding more than three points but still closing at its previous record low point. New York Chicago and St. Louis advanced six points, Call money opened at one per cent. Foreign exchange rates were quoted lower, demand sterling declining cent and a half to $3.48¼ at the opening.

HIGHER AT OPENING.

Prices were higher at the opening, but the rise was not by offerings on a scale sufficient to check the advance for a few minutes. But it was soon found that the market could absorb the supply and the upward movement was resumed. Rails were early leaders, with steels and rails close behind. Delaware, Lackawanna & Western sold up six points to five years making more than ten points above after the start. Atlantic Gulf made the largest opening gain, going up 2¾ on the first transactions. Mexican Petroleum and Pan American were the most active oils and U. S. Steel the leader in its department. Baldwin responded to feature equipments. Studebaker, the foremost motor, and Reading were first among rails. Erie soon sold at a new high for 1920. By the end of the hour rails were above the opening level and were sharing leadership with steels.

LESS AFFECTED BY MONEY.

Tight money has had less effect upon the stock market so far this month than it had during the Summer and at a period when it was feared that tension would increase the call rate to choke the minimum for months and time funds are more abundant than before this year. In New York it is realized that time offerings last week totalled from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000. After the middle of next month there is belief on the part of many bankers that the money trend will be downward and that credit will become more of an index of prosperity than the call rate by choice or dereliction for commodities and a contraction of business. The influx of gold from Europe is likely to greatly improve the credit position during the autumn.

Bankers have held their own in regard to reserves so far during the crop moving season and harvest requirements have ceased to cause nervousness. But money is still flowing westward and it is possible that payment of income and excess profit taxation tomorrow may be felt a little by borrowers before the week is over. The slowing by Federal Reserve banks as to reserve ration was about what was expected. Bankers attribute the weakness of foreign exchange to labor conditions in Italy and England more than to the amount of cotton bills offered or to any other cause.

Wall Street Briefs

QUIET TRADING IN BOSTON

Tone is Good on Local Exchange During the Forenoon; Curb More Active

Price irregularity prevailed on the Boston exchange at the opening and during the forenoon. The upward movement in New York was not duplicated here, but the tone was good in the main and gains predominated. Utilities were sold at a new high for this year to date. New Haven was higher, but quiet. Coppers and range for coppers was small, a number being unchanged. It was a barren market, in fact. Packing issues were somewhat heavy. Trading was of moderate volume and confined to comparatively few stocks.

Fractional gains were made by American Cot & Engineering, Libbey Bigelow and Walworth. Carson Hill advanced more than a point.

Mexican Investment, a point, but recovered. Small recessions were recorded for Ventura, Seneca, International Paper, Tariff, International and National oil.

CURB MORE ACTIVE.

The Curb had a more active start than usual and the trend was upward, a majority of leaders advancing from one to early transactions. Among the leaders were Arizona Tip Top, Eureka and Black Hawk. Strong issues at the opening included Crystal, Black Hawk, Ophir, Denbigh, Ruby, Little Kingdom and Southwestern Pennsylvania part paid. Arizona Tip Top was off at the start. It soon recovered.

At 11 o'clock Eureka was up 2 cents at 22 cents, Black Hawk 5 cents at 16 cents, Boston & Montana 5 cents at 9 cents, Imperial 6 cents at 19 cents, Ruby 6 cents at 56 cents, Mohawk 3 cents at 56 cents and Little Kingdom 2 cents at 50 cents.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

Parish & Bingham directors are to meet today and are expected to declare the regular 11 quarterly dividend.

For August 1 this year the Calumet & Arizona Mining Co. had cash and copper at the mines valued at $1,000,000 and paid a quarterly dividend on its 50,000 shares. It showed an increase in earned surplus for the period, after deducting reserves for depletion, depreciation and taxes.

The Boston & Maine bought its car mortgage up to an average of 19.4 miles per car in June comparing with 16.7 in May, 15.4 April and 12.3 in March.

Lyman, Rice & Co. and D. White & Sons in Boston are offering New Hampshire reclaimed tire fabric at a price that three weeks ago was $1.50 per lb. now $1.

Chelsea, Mass., has sold a temporary loan of $500,000 at 5 per cent interest, dated September 14 and payable May 19, 1921, to Old Colony Trust at 6 per cent, plus $1 premium.

The Ahmeek Mining Company has declared a dividend of 50 cents a share, payable October 1.

Profits reported from Butte & Superior, one of the three ore bodies on the 2,700-foot level of the Butte & Superior mine of the Butte Coalition Copper Co., opened on Saturday into over twenty-five feet of solid ore by measurement which is estimated should run from 35¢ to 40¢ per ton, copper and 1½ ounces of silver per ton.

New York Sub-Treasury Loss

New York, Sept. 14.—The sub-treasury lost $11,327,000 net today to banks. It received $5,000,000 in cash on loan since Friday of $14,178,000.

THE ADVANCE

Our consistent advices of the past month to the point that stocks were due the bargain counter and should be purchased without delay, have been amply borne out by market developments of that period.

Since August 10th the seasoned Curb securities have registered advances from 50c up to $14 per share.

Less than a month ago we addressed an open letter to our clients calling attention to the bargain prices at which seasoned securities were selling, and we are going to reprint a paragraph which we emphasized, as follows:

"We are giving you information in this letter which is not general knowledge, but which in due time should be reflected by market developments. It is up to you yourself to take advantage of same. Everything considered, therefore, we cannot urge too strongly the immediate taking advantage of present low quotations for seasoned securities."

We will be pleased to send you without obligation a copy of our latest Weekly Market Digest, which thoroughly and conservatively reviews the market situation as well as pointing to issues which in our judgment can still be purchased for substantial profits.

Congress Is Bound by Terms of Article X., Says Borah

HERE IS ARTICLE X.

"The members of the League undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the League. In case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression the Council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled."

By WILLIAM E. BORAH,
United States Senator from Idaho.

IF we enter into the contract embodied in Article X. of the League of Nations covenant, we must comply with the terms of the contract. As Abraham Lincoln once said, "The promise being made, the promise must be kept."

It is wholly immaterial, therefore, whether one department of the government or another must act; whether the Commander-in-Chief of the navy and army is to execute the contract or whether in certain emergencies he will need the assistance of Congress. The contract we are asked to make would bind all departments of government alike.

If we enter the league and the territorial integrity of any member country is assailed and Congress is called upon to provide munitions and men, it will be obliged to do so or choose the alternative of violating a solemn contract.

President De Valera Given Great Welcome

The great welcome given President De Valera of the Republic of Ireland reminds us of the old-fashioned welcomes which Americans used to give to the great representatives of the struggling causes of liberty the world over when as fugitives they came to America. In the old days the people and their officials, the masses and the government, joined in the welcome.

In those days we were not afraid of giving offense to a tyrannical foreign nation by the open expression of our sympathy for the struggles of oppressed peoples against the dominating nation. Especially is the history of Ireland rich with expressions of sympathy from our great men as well as from our public at large.

Washington never made a stronger statement or one more feeling than his declaration of sympathy for Ireland in her struggles for liberty and his statement that but for the success of mere force alone, he, himself, like the Irish leaders, would have died on a British gibbet instead of living to be honored and admired.

For two generations Presidents of our country have wanted and dared to express their sympathy for Ireland's struggle for freedom.

British Labor for Free Nations

Its Stand on Russia and Ireland an Example for American Labor

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

Organized labor in Great Britain is showing a devotion to principle and a statesmanship which ought to make the British government and the American government, and especially organized labor in America, feel ashamed.

Organized labor in Great Britain has put its foot down against further British persecution of the people of Russia and it has put its foot down so firmly that the British government knows that it can no longer connive with France and with President Wilson in the petty persecution of the great Russian people to promote the profiteering schemes of the international bankers in London, Paris and New York.

Organized labor in Great Britain took this position in favor of freedom of the Russian people to choose the kind of government they want, because it believes in the right of self-determination and in the other fourteen points which Mr. Wilson merely professed, and every one of which he has violated at every opportunity afforded him to do so.

Continuing in its consistent adherence to the fourteen points which Mr. Wilson has scrapped, British organized labor declares in favor of Ireland and reminds the British government of something that a great many people in the United States want to remember in judging the Irish question, namely: That the first people to talk about resistance to law and order and the first to bring in German munitions were not the Sinn Fein, but were Carson and his minority crowd in Ulster.

They were the ones who warned Great Britain that if the Home Rule bill passed they would resist it.

They were the ones who drilled openly their followers for the purpose of carrying out their threat, and they were the ones who imported German munitions to equip this rebellious minority in Ulster.

Their rebellion and treason was rewarded by the withdrawal of the Home Rule bill and the placing of Carson, the leading traitor, in the Cabinet.

Now, when the Irish majority undertook to do exactly the same thing, having seen it successful and honored by the British government, they were treated with the firing squads and their best men were executed as traitors.

It is this terrible distinction which lies at the bottom of the implacable hatred by Irishmen all over the world of the British government and the British Tory class which controls that government.

More Truth Than Poetry

When You're in a Fight, Fight!

By S. E. KISER

I shall not try to win the election by answering unfair charges or dragging public attention into the race.—Mr. Harding.

IT is noble to endeavor to be fair,
It is manly to be truthful when you can;
No doubt God loves the man who's on the square
In daily dealings with his fellow man.
It's wrong to stab another from behind,
But when you're in a corner and must fight
You are pretty sure to find, even if your heart is kind,
That it doesn't pay to be too darned polite.

YOU can't throw mud without becoming smeared,
Nor wallow in a sewer and be clean,
And it isn't any credit to be feared
For methods that are rowdyish and mean;
But we haven't any record that will show
A high regard for quiet gentleness;
When you're hit it doesn't pay you to be slow
In handing out the wallops you possess.

THE truthful man is worthy of our praise,
We ought to follow him whose ways are just,
But our notice still is claimed by those who raise
The largest and the thickest clouds of dust.
The scholar in his corner praises poise,
The preacher tells us patience is sublime;
But the gentleman who never makes a noise
Leaves few indents upon the sands of time.

BE earnest and be truthful and be kind—
That is, unless the other fellow's rough;
Be dignified and gentle and refined—
Unless you have to call a bully's bluff.
Don't let the ugly flame of hate be fanned
By selfish hopes or vanity or spite,
But try to understand, when you've got a fight on hand,
That it doesn't pay to be too darned polite.

Leave Out Religion

Editor Boston American:

Your editorial entitled "Politics and Religion" should receive the approval of every fair-minded American. Those consistent gentlemen who call themselves patriotic Americans seem to forget the first principles of Americanism. The best test of a man's Americanism is his observance of the fundamental principles as laid down by the Constitution of the United States. But these poor overworked A. P. A. cannot take the time to read the Constitution. In fact, a large majority of these patriots can't afford the time to get naturalized. They are too busy looking after British interests and insulting decent Americans as they did at the recent Pilgrim celebration. In politics let us vote for the candidate best fitted for the office and let his religion alone.

No Gas Famine

But then, if we are going to have a gasoline famine and no fuel to run on, there's an end of noises, so what's the use. We've all had gasoline famine brandished in our faces this Summer until we are sick of hearing about it and the Pacific Coast motorists have even had a chance to feel what it means. But—and here's where we enter—there ain't goin' to be no gas famine, not now or even forever. Are you sure of that? Yessir we are, positive and we can prove it.—October Motor.

Dear K. C. B.—If I don't tie 'em they come off, and if do tie 'em the cord cuts into me all around. And I tuck the shirt in and wake up and it's out and has worked up under my arms. But I got three suits for a present and my wife says I've got to wear them.

For God's sake, K. C. B., how do you wear pajamas?

Bethlehem, N. H. PATSY.

MY DEAR Patsy.
I DON'T wear them.
AND AS I've said.
IN THIS same column.
BEFORE I'LL do it.
I'LL GO to bed raw.
I HAD a suit.
MANY YEARS ago.
THE VERY first suit.
I EVER saw.
AND I didn't know.
WHAT THEY were for.
THEY WERE sent to me.
FROM AWAY back East.
WHEN I lived West.
AND I supposed.
AS THEY were light.
AND IT was hot.
WHEN THE fool things came.
THE INTENTION was.
THEY SHOULD be worn.
ABOUT THE house
AND I dressed all up.
AND NEW white socks.
IN CANVAS shoes.
AND SAT around.
AND WENT outside.
WHERE THERE was a hammock.
AND LAID in that.
AND THEN got up.
AND PLAYED croquet.
AND NEIGHBORS came.
WHO HADN'T been East.
WHERE THEY wore the things.
AND I explained.
THEY WERE being worn.
THROUGHOUT THE East.
AND WERE very cool.
AND THE neighbors thought.
THEY WERE quite all right.
AND SENSIBLE.
AND A few days later.
I DISCOVERED.
WHAT THEY were for.
AND EVER since then.
I'VE HATED the things.
AND IF I were you.
I'D BURN 'em up.

I THANK you.

Olympic Athletes Criticize Head Coach Moakley

Successful Cornell Trainer Said to Have Failed Utterly to Live Up to the Standard Set in Previous Contests

By Charles E. Parker,
The American's Correspondent at the Seventh Olympiad

JACK MOAKLEY, head coach of the American Olympic track and field team, and for many years a most successful and exceedingly popular athletic trainer at Cornell, will be prominently included in the list of American Olympic officials to be criticised by returning athletes, and among those who will air grievances will be several of the best athletes New England has produced.

Whether Moakley's alleged faults were those of commission or omission has yet to be determined, but that he failed utterly to live up to the standard set by the late Mike Murphy, head coach of previous Olympic teams, is the belief of many of the athletes and at least two of the assistant coaches.

Members at Fault

A Cornell man, who accompanied the team, probably correctly estimated the situation when he said: "Jack is a college coach. He has been at Cornell for many years, where the boys worship him and where everybody takes his every wish as a command and hastens to fulfill it. He is not familiar with the pulling-hauling politics of those prominent in American Olympic affairs and was not prepared to effectively combat them. His record as a successful college coach cannot be taken away from him, but I am frank to admit—and I am a Moakley enthusiast—that he was not a success as an Olympic coach. I firmly believe, however, that the American Olympic committee, or some of its members, are chiefly at fault."

The first criticism involving Moakley came with the naming of the membership of the American Olympic track and field team. Prior to this happening, the Olympic committee had announced that the work of American athletes in all meets, from the Pennsylvania Relay Carnival until the final Olympic tryouts at the Harvard Stadium, would be considered in selecting the makeup of our Olympic aggregation, and it was generally believed that the committee realized that some men might not be at their best in the final tryouts but that their previous record might entitle them to selection.

Nightingale's Case.

There were several instances in which the latter appeared to be the case. There were others where it did not, and one of the most notable of these concerned a New Englander—Gordon T. Nightingale of New Hampshire State College—generally admitted to be the greatest three-mile or 5,000-meter runner in the country, who at the Penn Carnival soundly defeated E. A. Montague, England's long distance champion, and the man who at that time was considered the most difficult man our Olympic distance men would have to meet.

Nightingale was ill and unable to sleep the night before the final tryouts at Harvard, and it will be remembered he was forced to quit the race. But there was at least one other man in that race—Hunter of California—who was forced to retire. Yet Hunter, and not the experienced Nightingale was picked for the 5,000-meter group, and Hunter was started in the 5,000-meter run at Antwerp, and, as was anticipated by not a few, Hunter quit in his trial heat at the Belgium Stadium.

No Preparation

It is claimed by some that Moakley did nothing in the way of preparing the athletes for their events and that the assistant coaches, in the absence of instructions, assumed charge of certain branches of the work. Lawson Robertson taking over the sprinters, hurdlers and middle distance men, Bill Hayward of Oregon handling the field event performers and Mike Ryan of Colby working with the Marathoners and long distance runners. Certain circumstances on the trip across may have fully accounted for the latter situation.

In any event, however, the assistant coaches, because of their closer association with the athletes, believed themselves to be in a position to select from the six men entered in each event, the four who should start. And it is because in several instances the selections made by the assistant coaches proved anything but those who were started in the event that there is a further proneness to criticize the Olympic head coach.

System of Selection

The system of selecting the four starters, as it was worked out, required the assistant coach in charge of a particular group of athletes to recommend to the American Olympic Committee the men he thought were best able to produce results. What happened to his suggestions, after that, occurred behind closed doors, but it is quite generally agreed that one Bob Weaver, a member of the Olympic Committee and president of the Pacific Coast A. A. U., promptly took command of the situation and wherever possible and when not otherwise provided, introduced a Coast athlete in place of one or another of the men recommended by the assistant coaches.

The first case concerned Jake Driscoll.

Jake, it will be remembered, failed to place in the Harvard Stadium 440-yard final, owing to the fact he was crowded against the Stadium wall just as he was inaugurating his spurt down the back stretch. Jake, however, did win his trial heat in forty-nine seconds flat that meet, and the week before, at Philadelphia, he won the eastern quarter-mile championship, turning in a forty-nine seconds trial and a forty-nine second final, thereby stamping him as one of the very best 440-yard men of the year, and it was because of this record he was named for the Olympic team.

Fastest of All.

Now, immediately prior to the games at Antwerp, Jake was traveling better than ever in his career. Jake knew this himself and the middle-distance men who practiced with him—such men as Ted Meredith and Earl Eby—stated he was faster than any of their number.

The day before the 400-meter trial heats at the Antwerp Stadium, Lawson Robertson made his recommendations as to what men should start the event and the list was: Jake Driscoll, Earl Eby, Frank Shea and Ted Meredith, yet when the men that Coach Moakley sent to the mark were Schiller, a Californian; Emery of the Middle West; Shea and Meredith, and in the final heat of the Olympic 400-metre dash Schiller appeared not to try to run after the first 100 yards and Emery was distanced long before the finish.

The second case involved George Dandrow of York.

Two days prior to the trial round in the Olympic hammer throw Assistant Coach Hayward called the six American hammer throwers together and informed them that he was about to stage a final tryout and that the men who finished one, two, three and four in that tryout would be the men to start the event at the Antwerp Stadium. It so happened that Dandrow was suffering from a severe cold and had planned to remain indoors that day, but rather than sacrifice his chances of getting into the Olympic meet he decided to compete in the tryout.

Dandrow Not Picked

Dandrow conserved his efforts, using only three throws, while the other candidates used six. His best three gave him third place by a substantial margin and Coach Hayward informed him he surely would start the event. Dandrow, who is a youngster and a newcomer in athletics, cabled this information home, pleased as Punch, at his lot.

When the American hammer throwers took the field, however, Dandrow was not in the number. In his place was McEachern from the Coast A. A. U., who had finished fifth in Hayward's trials, and McEachern was eliminated in the first trial round at the Antwerp Stadium. McEachern's best throw on the latter occasion was about 143 feet; Dandrow's throw in the American trial was 167 feet.

The third case had to do with the 400-meter relay, in which Billy Hayes was one of the figures.

For two reasons Lawson Robertson recommended that Hayes and Jo Loomis be two of the men to run in this event. One reason was that both were travelling mighty fast and both are excellent men in handing the baton; the other reason was that neither had been given chances in the two dash events on the Olympic program. And, with America then possessing sufficient points under the new scoring system to win the meet, the reward of actually competing in an Olympic meet could go to them without endangering America's standing. Yet neither was allowed to run on the team, two Coast runners supplanting them.

Failed to Assert Himself

Similar manipulations were attempted by American Olympic officials in past Olympic meets. One American track enthusiast called to mind an occurrence at the 1912 Olympics when two of the members of the present American Olympic committee attempted to put forward an athlete of their favor. Mike Murphy, the head coach of the 1912 team, quickly sized up the situation and in his inimitable fashion he turned upon them which, in substance, the following admonition:

"Now you men put on your high hats and go out and parade before the crowds. I'm handling the track team, and I'll start the men I believe have the best chances of winning."

Because Moakley failed to so assert himself when the occasion was ripe for it, many believe he is equally blameworthy with members of the American Olympic committee for our poor showing in the meet, and a number of those who favored his appointment as Olympic head coach over that of Lawson Robertson, his chief rival for the office, and such was the case with several Boston sport writers, will have some food for thought when the New England athletes return.
